Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 1.—Opening guns of the 1940 Republican campaign in Missouri were fired here tonight by Congressman Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts, House minority leader, who called it a crusade "to restore honesty and sanity in government."

It was considered significant that anti-New Deal Democrats were in his audience, and in his brief stop at St. Louis on his way from Washington, joined with leading Republicans at lunch with Martin at Union Station. That view was underlined by his declaration here that "the crusade transcends mere partisanship"; his praise for the "18 fighting Republicans in the House co-operating with the real Democrats."

About 6000 persons attended the rally, held in the local baseball park. Congressman Dewey Short of Glenside, only Missouri Republican representative in Congress, was introduced with Martin, who said Short must be sent back to the next House, which he hoped would be Republican. State Chairman Barak T. Mattingly, however, expressed his hope that Short would be "the next Vice-President of the United States."

Plaques for Legislators.
Honored guests at the rally, called by the Republican State Committee, were the public members of the State House of Representatives and three Republican State Senators, who supported Gov. Lloyd C. Stark's bill returning control of the Kansas City Police Department to the State. Bronze plaques were presented to the legislators for their support of the Governor, who is a possible Democratic candidate for the Senate in 1940.

Nominations for Republican nominees in the August, 1940, primary were not formally presented, but several names were discussed. Among those mentioned as possibilities for the nomination for Governor were Frank E. Atwood of Jefferson City, former Supreme Court Judge; Branch Rickey of St. Louis, baseball manager; State Senator George A. Rozier, Perryville; State Chairman Mattingly, St. Louis; J. Grant Frye, Cape Girardeau; former Congressman David W. Hopkins, St. Joseph; and May-Charles A. Shaw of Clayton. Some mentioned for the senatorial race were Walter C. Ploeser, St. Louis; Maxwell H. Davis and William E. Byers, Kansas City.

"Forward to '40."
Congressman Martin's address was on the theme, "Forward to '40." In the fireworks style of the old time Fourth of July speech, he charged the Roosevelt administration with bringing the nation to the brink of bankruptcy by its spending program, by hobbling law-making power and resources with hit-or-miss Government experimentation, and with a "top-heavy snoring bureaucracy."

He accused it of fostering "rueful political spoilsmanship" corrupting the entire Federal relief and civil administration; of depressing farm prices through its policy of free trade; of failure to collect the war debt.

Asserting that the administration's foreign policy "threatens to involve the United States in the bitter diplomatic feuds of Europe and the Orient," he said: "War involving this country would mean dictatorship almost overnight."

"We have been told often during the last seven years that huge Government deficits would bring recovery," he said. "But the bitter truth of this brain trust dream is now before us—a public debt exceeding $16 billion dollars; billions upon billions of idle capital piled up in our banks awaiting an opportunity of profitable investment; 10,000,000 unemployed; farm prices at ruinous levels; our export markets for farm products dwindled almost to the vanishing point; and our rich markets at home flooded with an ever-increasing tide of cheap imports."

Gets Starring Role

MISS EVELYN MOSER
EVELYN MOSER TO BE
'LEAVE IT TO ME' STARPrincipal Called to Hollywood, Municipal Opera Ex-Chorus Girl Gets Role.

Principal for a night last December, when a star of "Leave It to Me" was unable to reach New York in time to go on, Evelyn Moser, former member of the Municipal Opera chorus, will take over for good tomorrow evening as star of "Leave It to Me" at the Imperial Theater off Times Square.

The understudy, who was Gertrude Moser of the dancing chorus here in 1936 and 1937, steps from her place in the wings to a spot beside such veterans as Sophie Tucker and Victor Moore, who was partner in a stock company in which her mother did ballet and "kid" parts in the old days on the Keith Southern circuit.

Miss Moser's mother, Mrs. Marie Moser of 5630 Pershing avenue, left by airplane to attend the performance tomorrow evening and remain with her. Her father is W. C. Moser, editor of a newspaper in Staunton, Ill.

The editor's daughter got her chance in her first year at Municipal Opera when she was chosen from 100 applicants to do a song and dance in "Glamorous Night." Last year she got a nimble foothold on Broadway in Ed Wynn's "Hokey for What."

As understudy for Mary Martin, Miss Moser stepped into the role Dec. 5 when Miss Martin was delayed in returning from the bedside of her father in Weatherford, Tex., who died two weeks later. It was a "fat" part, with a lot of dialogue between the hit song, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and a burlesque of a strip dance, and Miss Moser's emergency performance was noticed.

Now Miss Martin has been called to Hollywood for a role opposite Allan Jones in a Victor Herbert film. Auditions for her part were held for 60 girls, but Miss Moser will take over.

SEC GATHERS DATA
HAMILTON-BROWNTrying to Find What Happened Between Re-ceivership and Bankruptcy of Company.SHAREHOLDERS GOT GLOWING LETTERNew Group Had Taken Over—Shares at $1,
Then Up to $8.25, Now of Doubtful Value.

The Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., which lost $405,000 in the four and one-half months before it plunged into bankruptcy in April, disappointed stockholders who had received a glowing letter forecasting successful operations last August, three weeks after the company had emerged from a Circuit Court receivership.

The receivership settlement provided no additional working capital and no adjustment of debts, but required the company to pay more than $60,000 in fees and costs and turned it over to a new group of operators headed by W. L. Collins and Chapin S. Newhard.

Examiners for the Securities and Exchange Commission who have been seeking to learn what happened to the firm in the nine months between receivership and bankruptcy, have obtained copies of the letter, along with other data, including statistics on the volume of trading in Hamilton-Brown shares on the St. Louis Stock Exchange. The stock had sold as low as $1 a share before the receivership, but climbed to $8.25 last October. The stock now is of doubtful value.

Broker Used Mailing List.
Also obtained by the examiners were copies of a postal card advertising that Newhard's brokerage firm, Newhard, Cook & Co., bought, sold and quoted Hamilton-Brown stock. These cards were addressed to stockholders, two days after the letter, on the shoe company's advertising machine. The letters were mailed on Aug. 9, and the cards on Aug. 11. Similar cards were mailed from the Hamilton-Brown office from time to time on notices of stock transfers.

The letter, sent over the signature of Collins, as president of the shoe company, contained the statement: "Public confidence in the new control and management seems to be reflected in the fact that the stock is now selling actively on the exchange at $4.75 a share."

Daily reports on the sale of shares show that the stock became active shortly before termination of the receivership, on July 16, 1938. The price climbed to $8.25 per share in October, then gradually declined to $1 in April, 1939. On June 22 last, when the concern was adjudicated bankrupt, the stock was quoted at 20 cents. It was suspended from the exchange on that date.

The St. Louis Stock Exchange recorded transactions involving 34,000 shares in 1938, as compared with 14,000 in 1937, 7000 in 1936, and 4000 in 1935. About 24,000 shares were sold on the exchange this year before the suspension. Stock Exchange records do not include over-the-counter transactions in brokerage houses.

The letter stated syndicate members, who had purchased, or had options on, 113,850 shares of stock from heirs of Alanson Brown, company founder, "have joined with you in investing their money in the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co.—because of their confidence that with new control and capable management the company can be rebuilt into the important and successful corporation it was a number of years ago."

After relating changes and economies effected under new set-up, Collins said he was confident he could eliminate operating losses in 1938 and 1939, and "show for the first time in five years an operating profit for the stockholders."

Each Credits Other.
When asked about the origin of the letter, Collins told a Post-Dispatch reporter Newhard "practically drafted the letter." He asserted that all he contributed to it was the information regarding operations while he had been in office.

Newhard, however, declared to the reporter that Collins conceived the idea of the letter and that the only part he (Newhard) had in its preparation was in "helping Collins with his English." Newhard said the mailing of the cards was a customary practice by brokerage firms and that any firm would take advantage of the opportunity to use a stockholders' mailing list. Asserting that his firm never had

VATICAN CITY BARS
TOBACCO, LIQUOR
SALE TO OUTSIDERSIncreases Prices to Try to Prevent Smuggling to Italian Territory.

VATICAN CITY, July 1 (AP).—Vatican authorities today restricted the sale of tobacco and liquor in Vatican City to 1025 persons actually resident therein and also increased prices in a further attempt to prevent smuggling to Italian territory outside.

A special border guard of Vatican detectives was created recently to prevent visitors to Vatican City—an area of 108.7 acres in the heart of Rome—from smuggling tobacco and liquor through the gates into Italian territory, where prices are much higher.

Today's new regulations deprive hundreds of Italian officials and employees who live in Rome outside Vatican City of daily supplies of smoking materials which they have been accustomed to carry out for personal use. They were imposed because persons without valid connections have been suspected of smuggling.

The price of American cigarettes was raised from 3.50 lire to 5 lire a pack (about 18 cents to 26 cents), and whisky from 12 to 24 lire a bottle (68 cents to $1.26).

In Rome American cigarettes cost 8 lire (42 cents) a pack and whisky 90 lire ($4.73) a bottle.

AUTO STALLS ON TRACK,
FOUR BARELY ESCAPEFarmer Drags Wife, Two Children Out Just Before Car Is Demolished by Train.

With his automobile stalled on the Frisco Railroad tracks, Richard F. Wright, a farmer, barely was able to get his wife and two children out of the car before it was struck by a fast freight train yesterday afternoon on the Gardiner Hill road near Festus. The engine derailed, the car was crushed and it fell into a ravine, demolished.

"It didn't miss us three feet," Wright told State Highway Patrolman H. H. Wells, as described the accident. Wright was out first, and then pulled his wife, almost helpless with fear, from the car. The engineer had seen the car after rounding a curve, but was unable to stop the heavy train in "that distance."

Wright said his wife was driving and had killed the engine in going up an incline across the tracks, and the car rolled back on the right-of-way, just as the engine appeared around the curve. The Wright family were driving to their home at Pevely.

Works in Idaho.

WALLACE, Idaho, July 1 (AP).—The Sunshine Mining Co., the nation's largest producer of silver, closed its big mine today.

Sunshine produced more than 11,500,000 ounces of silver last year. The Spokane Chronicle quoted R. Hardy of Yakima, president of the company, as saying "a combination of two reasons brought about the closing of the company's silver mine near Kellogg, Idaho."

"We are closing today, for we do not know what we will receive between now and Monday for our silver and we do not wish to get into a jam over it."

R. D. Lelsk, Sunshine manager, said at Wallace the mine will remain closed July 2, 3, 4 and 5. A further announcement will be made Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—The national capital, temporarily penniless because Congress failed to pass an appropriation bill, went "on the cuff" today for its municipal expenses.

President Roosevelt directed the District of Columbia commissioners to incur whatever indebtedness necessary until Congress passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill for the new fiscal year which began today.

Congress, entangled in quarrels over monetary and neutrality legislation, quit work this week end without supplying the funds.

Angelo Caraffa, manager of the Vonschire Market, 4601 South Kingshighway boulevard, was robbed of $986, the day's receipts, shortly before midnight last night by a man armed with a revolver.

Caraffa told police he had just finished counting the money when the robber, about 40 years old, was walked into the store, drew a revolver and ordered him to hand over the currency.

VOTE WEDNESDAYControversy Over Murphy's Opinion Extension of Powers Can Be Granted After June 30.

WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt was reported today to have taken a "no surrender" position in his dispute with a rebellious Congress over monetary and neutrality legislation.

Friends said that apparently the President had no thought of compromise on either issue. His last public word on the monetary question was an insistence that his powers be continued, and Secretary of State Hull today reiterated the administration's demand for neutrality legislation of the sort which the House rejected last night.

Administration leaders had the advantage of a long holiday week end to rally their shattered forces in an effort to put through the Senate next Wednesday legislation to revive the President's power to devalue the dollar and continue operation of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. Both sides admitted that the result was in doubt, though Senator Minton (Dem.), Indiana, predicted that by the time the vote was taken President Roosevelt's friends would be sure of the adoption of a conference report already approved by the House. On the other hand, Senator Taft (Rep.), Ohio, said he thought the report might be beaten.

Doubt on Neutrality Vote.
The prospects for neutrality legislation along the lines desired by the administration was another question. It was clear that administration forces would continue a fight for it, but some opponents contended that the issue was dead for this session.

A controversy within the monetary controversy was the reason given by some legislators that a favorable Senate vote Wednesday would not revive the monetary powers which expired at midnight Friday.

Sensors Taft and Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, leaders of the Republican attack on the devaluation authority, asserted today that the President's position "the position of France as it was defined by Premier Daladier before the Chamber of Deputies."

In adjoining the Chamber Tuesday, the Premier said he considered that Europe faced the gravest international situation in 20 years, and that France, though ready always to seek peaceful solutions of European problems, was determined to resist any attempts to dominate Europe by force.

Before adjournment, it was agreed to have a vote at 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Taking issue with Taft and Vandenberg, Senator Adams (Dem.), author of an amendment approved by the Senate, which would have put an end to the devaluation question, said that if the Senate approved the pending legislation there could be no question as to the President's right to cut an additional 9 cents of gold value out of the dollar at any time in the next two years.

Adams stood with Taft and Vandenberg, however, on the contention that the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, set up to maintain this country's currency on a desired level with those of other countries, could not be revived by the pending legislation.

"That two billion dollars is a part of the Treasury's general fund now and the only way that it can be set up as a stabilization fund is for Congress to appropriate the money, which the pending legislation doesn't do," Adams declared.

Murphy's Opinion.
Against this, however, administration leaders displayed an undeviating attitude. Attorney-General Murphy to the President asserting his opinion that the adoption of the legislation any time after the close of the fiscal year at midnight June 30, would confer the same powers on the President as would have action before that date.

With the world's money markets inactive for the week-end, the Treasury was silent on developments. It took no action toward fixing a new price for domestic silver, although the President's proclamation setting a value of 64.64 cents on the metal expired at midnight Friday also.

PARIS, July 1 (AP).—Sources close to the French Foreign Ministry said tonight that France had told Germany flatly that it would support Poland in case of any aggression.

Earlier today a warning was given in London by a British Government spokesman who intimated a statement that a Nazi move to absorb Danzig "in violation of existing treaties would at once create a most dangerous situation." The spokesman refused, however, to endorse another assertion that such a move "would necessarily" bring British guarantees of military aid to Poland into effect.

The French warning was given to the German Ambassador, Count Johannes von Welczek, this afternoon by Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet during a surprise interview at the Foreign Ministry, these sources said.

Premier Daladier earlier had called Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of all France's armed forces, back to Paris from a projected Corsican tour to keep the nation's defenses ready in event of trouble over the Free City of Danzig.

Bonnet talked also with the Polish and British Ambassadors, Jules Lukasiewicz and Sir Eric Phipps, these sources said.

Almost four hours of official silence followed his meeting with von Welczek, until a semi-official communique said Bonnet had outlined to the German envoy "the position of France as it was defined by Premier Daladier before the Chamber of Deputies."

In adjoining the Chamber Tuesday, the Premier said he considered that Europe faced the gravest international situation in 20 years, and that France, though ready always to seek peaceful solutions of European problems, was determined to resist any attempts to dominate Europe by force.

DR. JAMES MONROE SMITH

ST. LUKE'S SEEKS LOAN
ON ITS ENDOWMENTHospital Asks Court to Sanction Borrowing Up to $100,- 000 on That Collateral.

"Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by St. Luke's Hospital, 5535 Delmar boulevard, asking permission to borrow not more than $100,000 in order to obtain working capital and liquidate outstanding accounts."

It is desired to pledge securities in the hospital's general endowment fund as collateral for the loan. This fund has a present market value of $509,000, the suit states. The income from endowments last year was $88,558.

According to the petition the hospital's operating cost has exceeded its total income in recent years because of charitable work and decreased income. Accumulated accounts payable represent fuel, food and other articles of necessity. By rigid economy current expenses this year have been kept within current income, the petition states.

Deficits reported by the hospital in recent years were as follows: 1927, $36,114; 1928, $31,737; 1931, $61,151; 1932, about $68,000; 1933, $53,397; 1934, $24,863; 1935, $74,631; 1937, $35,500, and 1938, $13,157.

In 1933 the hospital obtained court authority to spend $172,883 in accrued interest from a bequest in the will of Mrs. Cora Liggett Fowler. Again in 1937 the trustees were authorized to spend not more than $100,000 of accumulated income from the Fowler endowment fund.

The new petition states that the hospital, if it could liquidate a substantial part of the accumulated accounts payable, could then purchase operating supplies on better terms and take advantage of discounts by paying cash.

Attorney-General Roy McKittick named as nominal defendant in the action. Income from a few endowments is restricted for certain uses and the suit relates to unrestricted endowments, it was explained by Alvin J. Goodbar, attorney for the hospital. However, he said the hospital did not feel free to anticipate income or pledge any of the securities in the endowments without court sanction.

WIDOW OF POTTER PALMER
SUES FOR $10,000,000 ESTATEFormer Waitress Seeks Accounting of Fortune Left by Grandparents to Her Playboy Husband.

SARASOTA, Fla., July 1 (AP).—Mrs. Pluma Louise Palmer, a former waitress, sued today for $10,000,000, to which, she claims, her late husband, Potter D'Orsay Palmer, was entitled under his grandparents' will.

Mrs. Palmer, the fourth wife of the 35-year-old playboy, asked Circuit Court for an accounting of the estate and a settlement of her claims.

Before her husband's death May 15, Mrs. Palmer filed a suit for cancellation of a written agreement she charged she was forced to sign to prevent discontinuance of her husband's allowance by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer. In the agreement, she said, she relinquished any claim to a widow's share in the estate. That suit charged the agreement was void because it was obtained under duress.

NEW ORLEANS, July 1 (AP).—Chief Constable W. S. Young of Brockville, Ontario, Canada, told the Times-Picayune by telephone tonight he was holding Dr. and Mrs. James Monroe Smith for Louisiana authorities.

Young said Dr. Smith, former Louisiana State University president, who is charged with embezzlement, telephoned him at 10 p. m. tonight from a resort 20 miles from Brockville.

Smith and his wife, both indicted on charges growing out of irregularities in university funds, are being held in the Brockville jail, the constable said.

Asked if they were in a cell and if they had any money when arrested, Young replied to each question, "I can't answer that."

The constable said Dr. Smith telephoned from Charlestown Lake, a resort, and "said he would meet me within an hour." Dr. Smith, he reported, told him he had just read of his indictment in the papers and wished to return to face the charges.

Taken on Way to Give Up.
The Smiths were arrested before they reached the Brockville jail, however, by Constable Ronald Young, a brother of the chief constable.

"He recognized the car from the description and license numbers, and halted them and brought them in," W. S. Young said.

He added the Smiths appeared "quite anxious" to return to Louisiana.

The Canadian officer said he had immediately notified Louisiana officers, who told him they would leave tomorrow morning to return the Smiths to the State. He said the Smiths might start back to Louisiana tomorrow afternoon.

The Smiths had been staying at a lake resort, Brockville is a mile and a half from the St. Lawrence River boundary between Canada and the United States.

Dr. Smith was indicted for $100,000 embezzlement of university funds, and his wife was indicted as an accessory. Their capture climaxed a six-day hunt which followed his resignation and flight Sunday night.

Smith, in addition, is accused of having obtained $500,000 of university funds on unauthorized notes and using more than $500,000 of unauthorized university bonds for speculation in the wheat market.

BATON ROUGE, La., July 1 (AP).—Sheriff Newton de Bretton said tonight he had received a telegram from the missing Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of Louisiana State University, saying he would return here immediately by airplane from Canada.

De Bretton said the educator informed him he had read in newspapers of his indictment here for embezzlement and would return to face the charges.

Earlier Gov. Earl K. Long announced that the building superintendent of Louisiana University had been "collecting 2 per cent from all building projects at the university" under a practice "put over" by Dr. Smith.

BLACKSHIRTS HOLD STRATEGIC HILLS IN PORT OF DANZIG

Occupy One Where Wireless Masts Are Situated and Barricade Some Paths on Another.

OFFICIALS DENY AID FROM NAZIS

'No German on Duty; Defensive Measures Taken Are Our Own,' Press Officer Says.

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF
FREE CITY OF DANZIG, July 1 (AP).—A tour of all parts of Danzig disclosed today that black-uniformed Danzig S. S. men were in complete charge of one hill and had control of part of another.

Business went on as usual in the city hall, and the radio station was unguarded by either police or S. S. men. Anyone could wander in or out and there were no provisions visible for caring for several hundred men who, according to many reports, are stationed within the radio building.

I know because I wandered through the radio building to find an obscure studio from which I made a broadcast. Later a taxicab driver who was waiting for me came up from the basement with the remark that he had been looking for me and could find no one except a janitor.

But on two hills overlooking Danzig I encountered the S. S. These blackshirts are "ready to defend the community in any emergency," I was told yesterday.

Some Paths Barred.
Tourists with field glasses and cameras went to the top of the Bismarck hill without molestation but were not allowed to take certain side paths in the park which crowns the hill. These paths were closed by barricade and signs stating that entrance was forbidden.

The S. S. had taken complete charge of the Hadesberg, on the top of which are the two masts of the Danzig radio station.

Danzig vibrated with rumors and many citizens were saying they were sure that German soldiers and members of Nazi semi-military organizations from outside Danzig were in town.

There were stories that mysterious trucks were bringing in loads of arms, and that a Polish moving van was pointed out as being under suspicion. I followed it to discover the van was carrying 150 mattresses which were being taken to the Wilhelm barracks for the use of extra men being in for augmented police service.

Gossip said that some of these new men were Germans who crossed the border from East Prussia. They wear on their sleeves little bands with the legend "Hawel" which was explained in official quarters that the band indicated they were Danzig S. S. men who had volunteered for police service.

Ordinances give the state authority to call in men for conscription service if necessary, but this provision has not been exercised.

"No Germans on Duty."
Danzig officials insisted that not a single German "with or without a uniform" was on duty in the free city.

"There is no German officer or S. S. or S. A. man on duty in the free city," Max Buhle, press officer of the free city, said. "Moreover no German aircraft artillery has been set up on the Bismarck hill. It is freely admitted that precautionary measures have been taken, and that is why you were unable to go to the top of the Hadesberg today but such defensive measures as have been taken are entirely our own."

Buhle discounted reports that Chancellor Hitler would visit Danzig on any specified date.

"Certainly we know nothing of such plans," he said. "Moreover it would be inconceivable that Hitler could cross Polish territory to reach the free city. Hitler's coming by sea would be almost equally difficult because treaties provide that a warship coming into Danzig must notify Warsaw. Warsaw has no authority to object, but it is scarcely to be believed that the Fuehrer would come to Danzig under such conditions."

Danzig to Declare Self Back in Reich When Hitler Gives Word, Nazis Say

Action to Be Based on "Right of Self-Determination" and They Don't Think Britain and France Will Fight.

BERLIN, July 1 (AP).—High quarters tonight said that the Free City of Danzig probably would return to Germany through a declaration of Danzig citizens on the basis of the "right of self-determination." But when the step would be taken remained a mystery. There was a flood of rumors giving conflicting dates.

Adolf Hitler will determine the hour. In the past when he has decided to move he has done so suddenly, without letting the world into his secret beforehand.

Danzig is arming for such an eventuality, although the spokesmen say that the Free City will not take the initiative. It was thought here to mean merely that Danzig will not hoist the swastika flag until Hitler gives the signal.

Although Danzig is a small part of what the Nazis want from Poland—the port is included in Poland's customs system—the Nazi high command is thought to have decided to start with it because they regard it as the weakest part of the Polish armor.

The Nazis say that Poland's allies, Great Britain and France, will not fight over Danzig, which they say "is beyond doubt a German city and wants to return to the Reich." (Danzig was a part of Germany before the World War.)

Everything in official quarters indicated that Germany considers the argument of "self-determination" holds as good today for Danzig as it did for Austria, the Sudetenland, and Memel, and that Britain will not dare oppose it.

There is at least one big difference between the situation this summer and that of a year ago preceding the drive against Czechoslovakia. Now German propaganda is not driving headlong against the Poles with tales about atrocities and with threats of action, as it did against the Czechs. This time Britain and the new bloc of allies are the main target.

The Foreign Office categorically denied today that Hitler or his first aid, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, or any other leading Nazi planned to go to Danzig. The Foreign Office said that in any case none of them would go until after the Free City was annexed by the Reich.

Bad weather drove Hitler from his mountain top summer residence at Berchtesgaden to Munich, Nazis said he was expected to spend a quiet week end there.

Six-Point Program.
The six-point program referred to by Hitler would:

1. Prohibit American ships from entering combat areas. (The House stripped from the pending bill a provision which would have authorized the President to designate such areas and order American ships to stay out.)

2. Restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas. (The bill provides that Americans traveling on vessels of belligerent nations do so at their own risk.)

3. Provide that before a belligerent can have American goods exported it must obtain title to them. (The bill includes this.)

4. Continue existing legislation on loans and credits to nations at war. (The bill would prohibit such loans, while giving the President authority to permit regular commercial credit up to 90 days.)

5. Regulate solicitation and election in the United States of funds for warring nations. (The bill prohibits solicitation.)

6. Continue the National Munitions Control Board and the system of arms export and import licenses. (The bill provides for this.)

Repeal of the mandatory embargo on sales of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents is the heart of the administration's program, but the House voted for an embargo on sales of arms and munitions, striking out "implements of war."

HULL MAKES NEW PLEA FOR REPEAL OF ARMS EMBARGO

Tells Congress Six-Point Plan Would Tend to Prevent War as Well as Keep U. S. Out of One.

WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—Voicing a new plea for approval of the administration's neutrality program, Secretary of State Hull pointed out today that it was needed not alone for the country's own interests but to encourage world peace.

Hull's statement was made at a press conference, but it was obvious that it was directed as well to Congress, where a coalition of Republicans and Democrats in the House ripped the administration's measure to pieces last night and approved an embargo on arms sales to nations at war.

Referring pointedly to European tension, Hull said he "must continue to urge" the embargo repeal he submitted to Chairmen of Senate and House foreign committees May 27.

Hull's statement said: "I am still thoroughly convinced that the six-point peace and neutrality program set forth in my letter to Senator Pittman and Representative Bloom on May 27, 1939, would be far more effective in the interests of peace and in keeping the country out of war than the present embargo law or any equivalent."

"This legislative proposal was submitted to the appropriate committees of the House of Congress after lengthy conferences with members of these committees and with other leading members of Congress of all political persuasions."

"It was my hope and belief that, while the proposal might not contain all that every individual member of Congress or every official of the executive branch of the Government wished, it would, in the present international exigencies, be regarded as desirable by a majority of Congress. Its failure to pass the House by a narrow margin is a matter of regret and disappointment from the standpoint of peace and the best interests of this country in its international relations."

"This six-point peace and neutrality proposal is not only best calculated to keep this nation out of war in the event war comes, but also, what is all important at this time, best calculated to make a far greater contribution than could the present law or its equivalent to the discouragement of the outbreak of war."

"At the same time, while doing this, it would likewise keep Government and nation 100 per cent within the limits of universal recognized international law. In these circumstances I must continue to urge the adoption of this proposal."

The six-point program referred to by Hull would:

1. Prohibit American ships from entering combat areas. (The House stripped from the pending bill a provision which would have authorized the President to designate such areas and order American ships to stay out.)

2. Restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas. (The bill provides that Americans traveling on vessels of belligerent nations do so at their own risk.)

3. Provide that before a belligerent can have American goods exported it must obtain title to them. (The bill includes this.)

4. Continue existing legislation on loans and credits to nations at war. (The bill would prohibit such loans, while giving the President authority to permit regular commercial credit up to 90 days.)

5. Regulate solicitation and election in the United States of funds for warring nations. (The bill prohibits solicitation.)

6. Continue the National Munitions Control Board and the system of arms export and import licenses. (The bill provides for this.)

U. S. IN YEAR SPENT $9,268,338,030, PEACETIME MARK

Public Debt Has Risen to $40,439,532,411, Highest in Nation's History, Treasury Reports.

WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—The Treasury closed its books tonight on the fiscal year 1939 and reported the Government had spent $9,268,338,030, the largest peacetime outlay in the history of the nation.

The final statement also showed the national debt had increased $3,274,792,096 in the last 12 months to $40,439,532,411, a peak never before touched in time of peace or war.

The expenditure of $9,268,338,030 was $3,600,514,404 more than the Treasury collected.

The deficit, the third highest in a peacetime fiscal year, compared with a deficit of $1,449,625,881 last year, but was about $472,000,000 less than the deficit of $1,921,625,881 months ago by President Roosevelt in his annual message to Congress.

Estimate Mistaken.
Total receipts of $5,667,823,625 were about $150,000,000 more than the President expected, but about $337,837,600 less than the amount collected in the previous fiscal year. Treasury experts explained that business last year proved somewhat more profitable than estimated, thus increasing income and other taxes.

The total expenditures were approximately $344,000,000 less than the amount the chief executive had estimated in his budget.

Expenditures for recovery and relief were about $867,000,000 more than in the previous fiscal year. There was an increase of $1,032,000,000 in public works expenditures, including Works Progress Administration, but against this increase, there was a decrease of $120,000,000 in expenditures classified under agricultural aid and $45,000,000 in other items.

General expenditures of the Government totaled $5,328,000,000 for the 1939 fiscal year, an increase of $867,000,000.

The principal increases under this classification were: Departmental, $86,000,000; public works, $64,000,000; expenditures under the National Security Act, $51,000,000; national defense, $101,000,000; interest on the public debt, $14,000,000; agricultural adjustment program, $425,000,000, and Farm Tenancy Act, $24,000,000.

Some Decreases Listed.
The following decreases in general expenditures were listed: $30,000,000 under the Veterans' Administration; $22,000,000 in refunds on taxes; $36,000,000 under Civilian Conservation Corps and other miscellaneous classifications.

The statement also showed that during the fiscal year new issues of Treasury notes, Treasury bonds and savings bonds sold to the public totaled $5,200,000,000 compared with $3,624,000,000 in the previous fiscal year.

The computed rate of interest on all such new issues was reduced to 2.25 per cent from 2.265 per cent on like issues the previous fiscal year.

The decrease in general receipts was due in part to a $453,000,000 drop in income taxes. Taxes on cars and their employees fell $41,000,000, other internal revenue taxes dropped $47,000,000. Customs duties decreased $40,000,000 while miscellaneous revenue was down $20,000,000.

Scientists in Flying Boat Complete 40,000-Mile Trip

Reach New York After Blazing Air Trail From Australia by Way of Africa And Virgin Islands.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—An 18,000-mile pioneering flight from Australia by way of Africa and the Virgin Islands ended today when the $250,000 flying boat Guba descended on Jamaica Bay.

The 14-ton craft, carrying the six-man Archbold-New Guinea expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, had flown non-stop from the Virgin Islands about 1500 miles to the southward, the last lap of a journey that had carried it over territory never before seen by white men.

The plane participated in explorations in Dutch New Guinea, covering a total of 40,000 miles after it took off from San Diego, Cal., June 3, 1938.

Heading the party was Richard Archbold, owner of the plane, and research associate of the Museum. With him were Russell B. Rogers, first pilot; Lewis A. Yancey, who flew the Atlantic to Rome in 1929; navigator; Gerald D. Brown, flight engineer; Stephan Barrinka, assistant flight engineer, and Ray Booth, radio operator.

After docking at Jamaica Bay, the group was flown to Flushing (Long Island) Airport for a reception at the New York World's Fair.

British War Route.
Archbold said the survey flight and the scientific expedition had proved that Great Britain in time of war could reach Australia by air flying over only its own territory, "presumably friendly" French and Belgian territory and several flights over water, the longest being the 1400-mile trip over the Indian Ocean.

Of the scientific side, he said the plane proved a "tremendous advantage over all other expeditionary methods" because explorers in the past "could not have reached the territories that came under our scrutiny and would have starved on the way to the most fertile fields of our investigation."

He said about 20 per cent of the plant and animal specimens obtained in New Guinea were new to science and that 6000 specimens of plant life and 350 species of mammals were gathered.

The expedition was "treated in a very friendly manner by all the primitive tribes encountered," he said. "I'd rather deal with primitive man than any modern civilized or semi-civilized man because he sticks to his word."

Flight to New Guinea.
After leaving San Diego 13 months ago, the expedition went to Hollandia, New Guinea, and worked with a scientific party already on the scene. Last June 3, the Guba left Sydney, Australia, on a survey flight for the Australian Government, flying first to Port Hedland, Australia, thence to Batavia, Dutch East Indies, to Diego Garcia Island in the Chagos Group, Indian Ocean, to Mahe in the Seychelles Islands, and to Mombasa, East Africa. It stopped twice in Africa, first at Kismayu on Lake Victoria, and at Lagos, before reaching Dakar, Senegal, French West Africa, June 27. They left Dakar June 29 on the 3200-mile trans-Atlantic trip and arrived at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands Sunday.

R. H. Fleet, president of the Consolidated Aircraft Co., said tonight a sister ship of the flying boat Guba had been bought by England and would take off from San Diego, Cal., July 7 on a delivery flight to Birmingham, England, which, he said, would be a record non-stop overland trip for flying boats, 3500 miles. Several of the Guba crew, he said, would be aboard.

"We are far from the accustomed level of real American prosperity only because this New Deal crowd in Washington have refused to embrace common-sense American policies."

"The time has come to reverse this tragic trend of events," Denouncing the proposal for $500,000,000 in self-liquidating foreign loans, mostly to Latin American countries, he pointed out that 14 were in default now on private loans, and added: "Nothing has been done by this administration to collect even the interest on the $11,000,000,000 of war debts owing us from Europe."

Brig-Gen. E. R. Daley Takes Command as Army Begins Discharging President's Order.

"Congress Can Quit in Two Weeks."
WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—Congress can adjourn "within two weeks," Senator Bankhead (Dem., Alabama), insisted today, "if leaders want it." He said a congressional decision on these could be obtained with speed.

This made unfair competition with the large fleet owners."

EDEN STILL SAYS WAR MAY BE AVERTED

Chamberlain Tells Conservatives He Is 'Determined to Resist Aggression.'

LONDON, July 1 (AP).—Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who is being mentioned as a possible new Cabinet member, asserted tonight he thought there would be no war "if the true firmness of will and purpose of Britain can once be understood abroad."

Eden spoke at one of a series of political rallies while there was speculation over Cabinet revision to emphasize Britain's warnings to Germany, by including Eden and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty in the World War.

"The outlook for the immediate future is admittedly grave, even dangerous," he said. "It is not yet desperate. I, for one, certainly do not hold the view that war is inevitable. The mood of the British people is neither jingo nor defeatist. It is sober and resolute and unshakably determined. The era of unchecked aggression is at an end."

At another meeting Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood said that Britain was spending approximately $2,000,000 (about $3,360,000) weekly "on aircraft alone." He announced a new separate women's service for lighter chores duty with the air force in time of war.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon, in a speech, asserted: "There is no doubt today where Britain stands." He added that "the general political situation is serious and even grave, but I have no new declaration to make."

Prime Minister Chamberlain, who will make a radio speech on national service tomorrow, sent a message to a Birmingham Conservatives Association meeting asserting that the people "can rely on me to continue my efforts to preserve the peace of Europe while none the less resolutely determined to resist aggression or domination, and they may be satisfied that the front presented by this country to any possible attack has never been so formidable as it is today."

Chamberlain Tells Conservatives He Is 'Determined to Resist Aggression.'

LONDON, July 1 (AP).—Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who is being mentioned as a possible new Cabinet member, asserted tonight he thought there would be no war "if the true firmness of will and purpose of Britain can once be made plain to the world."

Eden spoke at one of a series of political rallies while there was speculation over Cabinet revision to emphasize Britain's warnings to Germany by including Eden and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Treasury, in the World War.

The outlook for the immediate future is admittedly grave, even dangerous, he said. "It is not yet certain, I, for one, certainly do not hold the view that war is inevitable. The mood of the British people is neither jingo nor defeatist. It is sober and resolute and unshakably determined. The danger of unchecked aggression is a real one."

At another meeting Air Secretary Kingsley Wood said that Britain was spending approximately $2,000,000 (about $3,800,000) weekly "on aircraft alone." He announced a new separate women's service for the Royal Air Force with the air force in time of war.

Small Truckers, Ousted by A. F. L., Plan New Union

TRYING TO REGAIN SOME OF BUSINESS

Often Machines Have Been Idle as Result of Deal for Favorable Contracts With Big Firms.

Individual truck owners in St. Louis and the county, who have had a rough road to travel since they were forced out of the A. F. of L. drivers' union two years ago in a deal which gave the union favorable contracts with large trucking firms, are forming an independent organization and will seek affiliation with the CIO.

The new organization represents an attempt by the owners, who have one to five trucks each, to recapture some of the business opportunities taken away from them when the A. F. of L. cards along with their A. F. of L. cards when they were expelled from membership. Business agent of Local 600 is Lawrence J. (Camie) Catanzaro, a member of the clique controlling the service of business.

Most Accepted Ouster. Catanzaro recently told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the ouster had affected 260 owner-members. Some of them continued as members of the A. F. of L. by selling their trucks and going to work as chauffeurs for larger firms, but most kept their trucks, accepted their ouster from the union and attempted the difficult task of getting along without A. F. of L. cards.

They were negotiating contracts at that time with large fleet owners. Catanzaro told the reporter in explanation of the ruling, "These owners were losing business to the small truck owners in the union, who were working for less than the union scale in many cases, working longer hours than the union permitted, and were able to cut prices. This made unfair competition with the large fleet owners."

The small owners were ousted, the competition ceased and Catanzaro's union got its contracts with the large firms. Complaints by the ousted members, joined in by several contractors who had been put on the unfair list by Catanzaro's union, were in vain. They were investigated by the Public Works Administration, but no report has been made public.

Catanzaro denied to Government representatives that the exclusion of the drivers or contractors was unfair.

Reason for Difficulties. Difficulties of the small owners since they were forced out of the union have been due to the fact that materials hauled by drivers of small trucks have been used for the building of the new union. The matter of CIO affiliation of the new organization has been discussed by its leaders with John J. Lynch, secretary of the CIO, who works in the union. Lynch has informed Brophy, director of the CIO, of the discussions, but no action has been taken.

Many members of the new association have joined the quarry workers' union since being forced out of the A. F. of L. group. The quarry union, which has contracts in this district with large quarries, represents all classifications of workers employed in the production of stone, sand and gravel, including chauffeurs, drillers, laborers, maintenance men and mechanics.

Portadition of the union recently was extended by Brophy to include road and dam construction. Lynch told the reporter that the CIO would come into direct conflict with A. F. of L. crafts in road construction and hauling if a charter were granted to the truck owners' association.

Body Vernon of Movies Buried. GLENDALE, Cal., July 1 (AP).—Funeral services were held at Forest Lawn Memorial Park today for body Vernon, 42 years old, early movie comedian. He died of a heart attack Wednesday. Among pallbearers were Preston Foster, Ralph Morgan, Raymond Griffith and Monte Blue.

First Manhasset Fire Escape

MANHASSETT VILLAGE GETS A FIRE ESCAPE

First of 52 to Be Erected Is Installed at Demand of Prosecutor.

Installation of the first of 52 exterior fire escapes to be erected at Manhasset Village, 254-family apartment group in Richmond Heights, in accordance with the demand of Prosecuting Attorney Stanley Wallach in a mandamus suit he filed last March, was completed Friday.

The fire escape, placed over the entrance of a nine-apartment unit on the north side of McCutcheon road at Eager road, consists of two steel balconies at windows opening from the second and third floor stairway landings and connected with the roof and the ground by steel stairs and ladders.

The third-floor balcony does not connect directly with that of the second floor but leads by a stairway to the top of a ladder extending from a point about four feet from the ground to second floor level. Another ladder goes to the roof from this balcony. The balcony for the second floor landing, midway between first and second floor levels, leads to the ground by another ladder. The two ladders going to the ground are on either side of the building entrance.

Plans for the fire escapes had been approved by the Prosecuting Attorney's office as in compliance with State safety laws.

Prosecutor Wallach filed a mandamus suit after the Post-Dispatch had called attention to the fact that both State law and the Richmond Heights building code had been violated by failure to install more than one fireproof exit for each group of apartments.

The mandamus suit named Richmond Heights officials as well as Manhasset Village Corporation as defendants, but Wallach dismissed the suit as to the officials when they ordered the apartment owners to install the escapes. About the same time the owners filed a return agreeing to the installation.

Previously, the Federal Housing Administration, which insured a $100,000 loan for construction of the apartments, had announced that it would require the construction of fire escapes if their necessity were judicially determined.

SAFER JULY 4TH EXPECTED UNDER NEW ORDINANCE

Tuesday to Mark First Celebration of Day in St. Louis Since Passage of Anti-Fireworks Act.

St. Louis, which had the worst record for fireworks injuries of any large city in the country last year, will observe the Fourth of July holiday on Tuesday in, presumably, a safer fashion.

It will be the first celebration of Independence day since the passage last year of the ordinance prohibiting the sale or discharge of fireworks in the city. Only public displays, permitted on written application to the Board of Public Service, will be allowed.

For many the day will provide opportunity for a long week end. Most Federal employees, for instance, began their holiday at noon yesterday and will not report for work again until Wednesday. However, Federal Judge Charles E. Davis will hold court tomorrow, necessitating opening of the District Attorney's clerk's and Marshall's offices. All employees in State administrative offices will be free tomorrow.

No Mail Delivery on Fourth. City Hall and the local courts buildings will be open tomorrow, but closed on Tuesday. Banks, stores and all exchanges will be closed on the Fourth. There will be no mail delivery, but receiving windows at the Main Postoffice will be open all day for the sale of stamps and the receipt of mail. The holiday mail collection schedule will prevail.

Chief of Police John H. Glasco issued a special bulletin to all members of the force informing them that there is to be strict enforcement of the fireworks ordinance. He told them to be especially on the alert for pre-Fourth discharge of fireworks.

Children shooting firecrackers and setting off fireworks in keeping with the holiday celebration were the police's chief concern. He said, but the policemen are to find out where the fireworks were obtained. Chief Glasco pointed out that the ordinance covers all types of the usual fireworks, including firecrackers, torpedoes, bombs, sparklers, colorful flares or torches, blank cartridges, toy pistols or cannons, and balloons with fire equipment attached.

Safety in traffic, handling of fireworks, water recreation and other phases of holiday celebration were urged by David L. Miller, president of the Safety Council, in the community forum radio talk last night. He said that July was a month of heavy tolls in accidents.

County Preparation. In St. Louis County, where 12 of the 33 incorporated towns have anti-fireworks ordinances, including most of the larger towns, County Hospital has stocked up with 100 injections of tetanus anti-toxin in preparation of treating serious fireworks injuries.

There will be three large public fireworks displays in the county. The annual demonstration at the Municipal Airport, which in previous years has attracted large crowds, will again be open to the public. Displays for the benefit of firemen will be held at Webster Groves High School athletic field and at Francis Field, Washington University, at 8 o'clock. The latter will be under the auspices of the Clayton firemen.

Daylight fireworks will be a feature of the airport celebration, which will include flying exhibitions. The program will open at 10:55 a. m. with daylight fireworks, and will continue to 9:10 p. m. Included in the flying phase will be maneuvers by the National Guard and Naval Reserve air units, a 25-mile race for light planes, acrobatic exhibitions by Pilot Claire Eunuch and C. B. McMahon, and a delayed parachute opening in a drop from 10,000 feet by Lee Chamblin. The night fireworks display will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

Y. M. C. A. Camp to Open July 25. The Y. M. C. A. camp on Lake Taneycomo near Hollister, Mo., will open July 25 for two weeks for association members and their families and friends, it is announced today.

LINDBERGH MAKES BRIEF STOP HERE, SEES OLD FRIENDS

Inspects 35th Division Aviation Equipment; Departs Today for Pacific Coast.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh spent yesterday afternoon and last night in St. Louis, visiting friends and inspecting equipment and personnel of his old outfit, the Thirty-fifth Division Aviation, Missouri National Guard, at Lambert-St. Louis Field. His schedule called for departure early today for the Pacific Coast.

He arrived at 11 a. m. from Patterson Field, Dayton, O., in the same low wing army pursuit plane he flew when he made a 35-minute stop at the airport May 5. His inspection of the National Guard unit was in connection with the survey he is conducting of the nation's military aviation resources.

Officers of the unit drove him to St. Louis hotel. Later he returned to the airport and met several of his old friends of the days when he flew a mail plane and commanded the National Guard unit.

Among these were Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, one of the backers of his New York-Paris flight in 1927, and Orville E. Scott, former airport manager. In the evening he attended a dinner party at the National Guard hangar and visited friends in St. Louis.

ROW OVER PARKING METERS TO BE AIRED AT MEETING

One Group of Merchants in University City Denounces Another for Keeping Issue Alive.

A row between opposing factions in the University City Chamber of Commerce over whether parking meters should be installed in the Delmar boulevard congested district will be aired at a public meeting in the University City Hall Friday evening.

One group of merchants charges the other with bad faith in keeping the question alive, contending it was settled at a recent meeting of the chamber by a substantial vote against the meters. Next Friday's meeting was called by Everett Brooks, president of the chamber, who invited city officials and residents to attend as well as members of the chamber. City officials say they have taken no position in the controversy but are willing to cooperate with the merchants in solution of the parking problem.

ANHEUSER-BUSCH BREWERY Demonstrations at Office, Bottling Plant and Carpenter Shop in Jurisdictional Dispute.

Pickets were posted at Anheuser-Busch Brewery yesterday by the Carpenters' District Council, which last Wednesday called a strike of carpenters, cabinetmakers and millwrights employed at the brewery because of a jurisdictional disagreement with the machinists' union over the installation and maintenance of machinery.

Three places on the extensive brewery property, the general office, bottling plant and carpenter shop, were picketed. The strike, in which union hooligans joined in sympathy with the carpenters, has interrupted several construction jobs at the brewery and closed the cabinet shop.

35 PCT. WED BY HART FROM STATES WITH RESTRICTIONS

Marriage Mill Operator Says He Performed 1326 Ceremonies in June.

Thirty-five per cent of those married last month by George R. Hart at his marriage mill in St. Louis County were from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin, he said last night. Each of those states requires either blood tests before marriage or advance notice of intention to wed, while Missouri has neither requirement.

Hart said he performed 1326 weddings in June. He said one Indiana girl deserted her fiancé at the altar just before the ceremony.

Boy, 6, Swims River Here in 19 Minutes

Sunny Kole of Edwardsville, "Tired" Half-Way, Sets Unofficial Record.

Sunny Kole, a winsome young Hercules from Edwardsville, swam across the muddy Mississippi River in 19 minutes yesterday, paddling about a mile and a half downstream, and setting what apparently is a new record for boy swimmers.

About 150 people watched on the river bank at the foot of Carr street when Sunny, who is 6½ years old, arrived to do his stunt. Sunny is blond and has squinty blue eyes. He weighs a chubby 62½ pounds and is 49 inches tall. His skin is tanned. He was wearing a neat pair of tiny blue trunks.

He didn't say a word when he got to the river, but walked right in and started swimming back and forth for the photographers. He's already an old hand at posing for pictures. When he came up for a breath, his chest was covered with mud and he spat out a thin stream of muddy water. He cut his ankle a bit on a stone, but that didn't seem to bother him.

Sunny's father, Stephen A. Kole, who was born in Germany and is a high school athletic coach, explained to reporters that Sunny was a sickly child until he was 3 years old, and had twice had pneumonia. "I've won 24 high school athletic championships," Kole said proudly, "but this is my greatest one here." He pointed down at Sunny, who at that time was posing for a picture with a little girl.

"My son was considered for the team," Kole said, "but he didn't quite make it. He's stronger than the kid who got the part but he doesn't photograph well. He's too blond and his hair is too short."

The father clips his hair in the Prussian military fashion.

Sunny is Versatile Athlete. Kole said he'd started Sunny on an athletic training program about three years ago. "I'll now challenge anyone in the universe to produce his equal at his age in athletic versatility," he said. There were a lot of other children in the crowd, but they were eating ice cream or buying balloons from the balloon woman.

Kole then enumerated Sunny's accomplishments, which are many. "He can do 60 push-ups," the father said, "throw a baseball 90 feet, high dive 20 feet, and climb a rope without using his legs. He can swim the short Joe Louis punch when he boxes and he's good at billiards and pool."

By this time Sunny was through posing for pictures and his mother called him up to give him a kiss. "I got a little water on that," she said. Then she asked Sunny if he was going to make it all right, but Sunny didn't answer. He walked right back into the river.

Kole changed to a new pair of light blue trunks and got in a rowboat to follow his son. Sunny waded out as far as he could and then, flanked by two life-guards, started out swimming a breast stroke.

Tired, but He Goes On. The river was high and the current carried the swimmers downstream fast. They went underneath the middle span of Eads Bridge. About halfway across Sunny called out, "Here, I'm tired," but his father told him to keep right on going. When they got to the Illinois side, just above the Municipal Bridge, Sunny wasn't breathing as hard as the two life-guards. All he said when he got out was, "Hot dog."

The ostensible reason for the swim was to break an unofficial record for children set last year at about 19½ minutes by James Lenney, 7 years old, of Edgemont. James' time was estimated by reporters, but Kole had a stopwatch.

CHASE AND PARK PLAZA IN COURT IN NEW ROW

Latter Seeks to Enjoin Tearing Up of Driveway Between Buildings.

The Chase and Park Plaza hotels, next door neighbors, whose relations have been somewhat strained lately by the attempts of the Chase to build an underground garage, now are engaged in an open quarrel over the use of the driveway between the two buildings.

Existence of the new quarrel was disclosed yesterday when the owners of the Park Plaza filed suit in Circuit Court for an injunction to restrain the Hotel Chase from removing the driveway, on which it was asserted work had begun last Thursday over protests by the Park Plaza management.

The petition contended that the Park Plaza had an easement in the driveway which extends on Hotel Chase property from Kingshighway to the delivery entrances of both buildings.

Sam Koplar, manager of the Hotel Chase, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that it was not planned to remove the driveway, but to depress it so that trucks would be able to get to the receiving room of the Chase but not to the delivery entrances at the Park Plaza.

"There's been too much congestion," he explained. "The Park Plaza has about 150 trucks a day coming in there, and our trucks have had a hard time getting through. We want to make it a more or less private driveway."

Koplar said it was the contention of the Chase management that, although the Park Plaza formerly had had an easement, this was voided when bondholders took over the Chase in a reorganization last January.

Owners of the Park Plaza were among the objectors who appeared before the Board of Public Service after the Chase applied for a permit last February to build its proposed underground garage. It was their contention that the garage would interfere with traffic to the Park Plaza and create congestion.

The Board of Public Service refused three times to grant the permit and the Chase has filed suit in Circuit Court to compel the board to give its permission.

Union and Electric Firm To Discuss Wage Change

1100 CIO Employees of Emerson Co. Say Pay of Some Has Been Reduced.

Representatives of the CIO electrical workers plan to meet officers of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. this week to discuss a recent change in the wage system about which employees have complained.

The 1100 union workers, charging that the new system has reduced wages as much as 11 cents an hour in some instances, have threatened to strike. Thursday night the workers voted authority to their union executive committee to call a strike if the company continues the objectionable wage system.

William Senner, union director, said the company had expressed a willingness to hear the complaint and that he hoped to arrange a meeting tomorrow. Emerson employees had a long strike in 1937, when 200 of them held the plant in a stay-in demonstration.

WALLACE OBTAINS TWO BILLIONS TO LEND OR SPEND

Appropriations and Government Reorganization Give Secretary Control of Vast Funds.

WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, given new powers and funds both by appropriation measures and the Government reorganization, became today one of the topmost spenders of the administration.

Budget authorities estimated Wallace would have between $2,000,000,000 and $2,500,000,000 to spend or lend in this fiscal year on programs designed to help agriculture gain economic parity with other groups.

A record-setting supply bill, signed somewhat reluctantly by President Roosevelt last night, gave Wallace $1,194,488,000 to finance crop and marketing control, surplus crop disposal, research and regulatory functions of the Department of Agriculture.

The 1940 re-ill bill, signed the same night, added $140,000,000 for grants and loans to financially distressed farmers. The President's proposed new lending program, now before Congress, would increase this figure to $390,000,000.

Other Big Funds. President Roosevelt's order transferring the Farm Credit Administration and the Commodity Credit Corporation to the Department of Agriculture gave Wallace control over credit resources from which upwards of $1,000,000,000 in loans may be made this year.

The Farm Credit Administration, heretofore an independent agency, extends loans to farmers for the purchase or refinancing of farms, and for production crops and livestock. The Commodity Credit Corporation makes loans to farmers on such commodities as cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco, wool and other products when surpluses unduly depress prices.

Assistant said Wallace would permit the Farm Credit Administration to operate as a semi-autonomous agency, exercising only the right to pass on broad matters of policy.

The Department of Agriculture supply bill made $773,000,000 available for subsidies to farmers who co-operate with crop and marketing programs. Included in this was $225,000,000 in unbudgeted parity payments which drew the criticism of the chief executive.

Roosevelt, while explaining he was not opposed to such payments, asserted Congress had failed to follow his recommendation that a revenue measure be enacted to provide funds for the payments.

The bill also provided $300,000,000 for disposal of surplus products such as cotton, wheat, dairy products, fruits, vegetables, lard and pork products. A part of the money will be used to subsidize the export of cotton, wheat and possibly lard, and the balance to subsidize consumption of these products by relief and low income families.

Signed Away Share in Camp Deeds Disclose Chester Hufnagel Is Their Successor as Part Owner of Meramec Resort.

Quit claim deeds filed recently at Clayton show that the one-third interest in the Meramec River Camp operated by the Amerika-deutscher Volksbund, the American Nazi group, which formerly was held by Anton Kessler, leader of the Bund here who has gone back to Germany, has been transferred to Chester Hufnagel.

Kessler, the deeds show, transferred his interest last February to Albert Mueller, who succeeded him as leader. Shortly before Mueller went back to Germany last May, he signed over his interest to Hufnagel. No address for Hufnagel is given on the deed.

The remaining interest in the camp is held by Dr. Edward F. Koll, a dentist of 2806 Shenandoah avenue, and his wife, and by Alfred and Louise Grafe. At the time of an investigation of the local bund by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Koll told the agents that he and the other deed holders held the property in trusteeship for the members of the Bund who had contributed to the purchase price of $2000.

THIRD OF 6 BROTHERS KILLED BY GANGSTERS

Body of Man With Police Record Found in Sack in Philadelphia Suburb.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1 (AP).—Gangland executioners today killed the third of the six notorious Lanzetta brothers of South Philadelphia. The body of William, known as "Willie," who was 38 years old, was found in underbrush on an estate in the exclusive "main line" suburbs 12 miles west of the city. It was trussed tightly in burlap potato bags. A wound in the back of the head apparently was caused by a bullet. One eye had been blackened.

A grocery boy stumbled over the body. Police photographed it, then searched the scene. Later the man's fingerprints were checked, showing the victim was "Willie."

His brother Leo was shot in South Philadelphia in August, 1925. Plus died with two bystanders in a volley fired from a speeding automobile on New Year's eve in 1938. Three other brothers have long police records.

Police of suburban Lower Merion Township described Willie's death as "a typical racket job."

Another, Ignatius, was the central figure last spring in a court test of a New Jersey anti-gangster law. He was released from a Trenton prison when the law was declared unconstitutional.

Gangland violence last flared in Philadelphia a month ago when Danny Day, paroled killer, was killed by gunfire as he drove his new automobile down a Central City street. Police studied circumstances of the Day shooting to find a possible link with the death of Lanzetta.

Closing on Mall for Europe. Full European mails will close at the Main Postoffice, Eighteenth and Market streets, at 9 p. m. tomorrow. Parcel post for Germany and Great Britain and full European mails will close at 9 p. m. Tuesday.

Lease in Hope of Profit Is $98,000 Liability With End Not in Sight.

When officers of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico Railroad, a Missouri Pacific subsidiary, leased land near their right of way at Greta, Tex., for an oil well, they had hopes of company profits. Instead, their venture turned out to be a liability.

For in June, 1938, a pocket of gas was struck strong enough to blow the well out of control. Production was so violent railroad tracks had to be moved and traffic on a nearby highway rerouted. Since then the railroad has been authorized to spend $98,000 in fruitless efforts to cap the well and still needs money for the purpose.

Yesterday counsel for Guy A. Thompson, trustee for the railroad, petitioned United States District Judge George H. Moore for authorization to pay $7500 to a private contractor who is at work in hope of a $25,000 fee if he succeeds in controlling the flow where others have failed. The petition says he has failed to date, but has spent all his resources of $12,429 and will be unable to continue without the advance.

When a petition was filed in 1938 for $30,000, it was estimated the total cost of getting the wild well under control might exceed $150,000.

ST. LOUIS PASSENGER TRAIN HITS FREIGHT AT CLEVELAND One Passenger and One of Crew Reported Out, Others Shaken Up in Collision.

CLEVELAND, July 1 (AP).—A St. Louis-Cleveland passenger train of the Nickel Plate Railroad plowed into the rear of a Nickel Plate freight train within Cleveland's city limits today.

One trainman and one passenger were reported cut, with others shaken up.

9,881,000 JOBLESS IN MAY, FEWEST SINCE DECEMBER

National Industrial Conference Board Estimates Employment for Month at 44,645,000.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—The National Industrial Conference Board, a private organization supported by large corporations, said today unemployment in the United States fell below 10,000,000 in May for the first time since December.

The total estimated for May was 9,881,000, about the same as last October, and 2.9 per cent below the April figure.

Total employment for May was estimated at 44,645,000, or 1 per cent over April. Greatest increase was due to settlement of the bituminous coal strike.

Residential building employment continued its upward increase, but manufacturing showed a greater than seasonal decline in employment, partly due to labor troubles. Agriculture showed a less than seasonal pickup in employment.

Emergency labor totals, including the WPA, CCC and PWA continued to dwindle, dropping another 3.8 per cent to 2,915,000, after an April drop of 8.6 per cent compared with March.

MAN KILLS WIFE FATALITY SHOOT ONE GROWN S

Brother of Latter Wounded—"They C at Me," Says Los Ang Parent, Who Is 65.

LOS ANGELES, July 1 (AP).—Albert Singer, a 65-year-old insurance salesman, surrendered to Sheriff's office today for shooting in the fatal shooting of his son at dawn.

Singer, accompanied by a attorney, was turned over to Detective Capt. Dalton R. F. who said he was "I tried to defend myself."

Mrs. Frances Singer, 65, said after she had been shot by the eyes as she lay in bed in Hollywood flat.

Harry Singer, 27, a son, was wounded in the neck and arm. He could be removed from the hospital, but his brother, William, expected to survive a bullet wound to his head.

William Singer's wife, a 27-year-old son, Billy, hid in a room and was not hurt. Detective George Williams, who was away from home two weeks, was having an argument over the shooting.

Singer told officers he was heavy financial losses in Chicago where he said he once was a successful candidate for Alder and in St. Paul, including a piece of property in the latter city. Patton said the man related decided to go back to Chicago. I wanted to make the most money to get my clothes and a by to my family.

I pleaded with my own blood to let me get my own and go. They came at me and tried to defend myself. I remember a thing until I was in the newspapers that I was not shooting my wife and son.

BRITAIN OUTLINES STAND ON POLAND

LONDON, July 1 (AP).—The British Government, in what amounted to an indirect Foreign Office communique, underlined today the determination of both itself and France to "fulfill their undertakings to Poland."

It avoided a specific declaration, however, that a Nazi pincushion from inside the Free City of Danzig inevitably would mean war.

Quoting verbatim from an outline published in the Times of the British viewpoint, understood to have been communicated last night to British newspapers by Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, an official spokesman dealt frankly with the possibilities of Hitler arranging an "apparently spontaneous" movement within Danzig for reunion with Germany and made it plain this would "at once" create a most dangerous situation.

The spokesman said the outline in the Times "in its entirety" represented Government opinion.

Prime Minister Chamberlain was reported considering taking Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty during the World War, and Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary, into his Cabinet.

The first of the 20-year-old conscripts, some 34,000 of about 200,000 eligibles to be enlisted, were called up formally for training. Britain's armed soldiers will approach the million mark by the end of the year.

Lord Halifax remained in town for the week-end after a few hours of watching cricket at Eton.

Chamberlain arranged to return Sunday from the country to broadcast a speech on the national service. In a published letter to a Conservative candidate for Parliament he requested a declaration that Britain was resolved to meet with force attempts to impose settlements by force.

King George VI will review a parade of 20,000 air-raid precautions workers, symbolizing nearly 2,000,000 enlisted for civilian defense in the Hyde Park tomorrow.

In the contrast of the day there was a half-page German Railway "vacationland" advertisement in the same edition of the Times which carried the policy outline issued by the Foreign Office.

Chicago Judge Censures Father and Mother, Both of Whom Are Remarried.

CHICAGO, July 1 (AP).—At the age of 17, Shirley Boese has learned that she is wanted by neither her father nor her mother.

Her parents were divorced in 1928 and she was placed in her mother's custody.

Yesterday the mother, who now is Mrs. Edna Boese Elmstrom, told Judge Rudolph Desort that the girl's father should care for her.

"I could take the girl," responded the father, "but I would lose my nappy home. My present wife would leave me."

Judge Desort censured both parents, then ordered his girl sent to a private school.

FIRE INSURANCE FIRMS SEND
$8,000,000 BACK TO COURT

Money Represents 80 Per Cent of Amount Impounded in Missouri Court Case.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 1 (AP).—The approximately $8,000,000 which went to the fire insurance companies in the 1935 rate compromise has been returned to custody of the Federal Court here.

The 137 companies involved completed the return to W. T. Kemper Jr., custodian, today.

The money represents 80 per cent of the approximately $9,500,000 originally impounded in the rate dispute. The other 20 per cent was returned to policyholders under the agreement.

The State Insurance Department has filed suit in Federal Court seeking to have the entire amount returned to the policyholders. The companies agreed to put the money back in the hands of the custodian pending a decision on the State's suit.

CALIFORNIA TO VOTE NOV. 7

Governor Calls Special Election on $30-a-Week Retirement Life Payment Proposal.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1 (AP).—Gov. Culbert L. Olson has set Tuesday, Nov. 7, for a special election on the $30 a week "ham and eggs" retirement life payment plan.

A similar plan was defeated last fall. Warrant recipients would buy stamps for cash. At the end of a year, the holder of a fully stamped warrant could get $1 cash for it.

And it would go out of existence. Under the revised plan, initiation and support of the system would be financed by a $20,000,000 State bond issue, capitalizing a statewide banking setup to handle the warrants.

SEC Gets Copies of Glowing Letter About Hamilton-Brown

issued any statement as inducements to buy Hamilton-Brown stock, nor had attempted to "position" or regulate the stock for a favorable market reaction, Newhard readily agreed that the mailing of the letters, followed by the cards, could be interpreted as an inducement. He declared emphatically that records of the brokerage firm showed how diligently it had avoided transactions suggestive of positioning.

Traded Only for Clients.
The firm, he asserted, bought no Hamilton-Brown stock for its own account, and in all transactions acted simply as agents for clients, buying and selling on the Stock Exchange. When the syndicate was negotiating for control of the firm, he personally had been retained. He said he handled only one Hamilton-Brown transaction, a sell order for 50 shares.

Newhard declared that all holdings of his firm and by members of the firm and their families in the syndicate had been retained. None, he added, had sold or disposed of their trust agreement certificates, representing shares deposited under a voting trust agreement involving the 113,850 shares. He said he personally had bought the stock at $7, and another member of the firm had bought at about $8 and sold at $1.

"If we had profited at the expense of our clients, that would be making a bad thing worse," he said. He added that "positioning" was not an unusual practice, but that with his firm's association with the shoe company it would have been untenable.

Discussed It With Examiners.
Newhard said he had discussed the case fully with SEC examiners, who came here from Chicago to make a "New it's my turn." He said he brushed past the maid into the living room. His wife, a self-supporting dressmaker, confronted him.

"You've been having fun for a year," Shapiro said, according to the maid. "Now it's my turn."

Then, the maid said, he drew an automatic pistol. "Get out of here and take the boy with you," Shapiro said to her. The maid and Jules went into the bedroom. Both heard Rhoda pleading with her father to sit down and talk things over. Then they heard six shots.

The maid was terrified but the boy ran into the room, he related, to see his father holding the pistol and staring at his wife and daughter, lying on the floor. The boy grabbed his father's arms. The man shook him off and ran from the apartment.

The maid was held as a material witness in $25,000 bail.

STORE OWNERS' END DISPUTE, RECEIVERSHIP SUIT DROPPED

Agreement Reached by Katchers and Gutins of House of Bargains, Inc.

A suit for appointment of a temporary receiver for the House of Bargains, Inc., and its affiliate, the Ill-Mo Leader Stores Co., filed last Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Katchers, was dismissed yesterday by stipulation in the court of Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley.

Counsel for the Katchers said an agreement had been reached ending the dispute which led to filing of the suit. The Katchers had sought removal of their associates in the two firms, Mr. and Mrs. David Gutin, as officers of the companies on the ground Gutin had "poisoned the minds" of employees, making them believe Katchers was going to dismiss them.

Job Insurance in All States.
WASHINGTON, July 1 (AP).—The Social Security Board reported today that all states, territories and the District of Columbia had employment insurance programs. BARTENDER ROBBED OF $290
BY THREE WHO ENTER TAXICAB

Driver Is Forced to Take Victim to City Limits of East St. Louis.

Alfred Maloney, bartender in an East St. Louis tavern, reported he was robbed of $290 early yesterday by three men who got in a taxicab in which he was riding and forced the driver to go to the city limits on United States Highway 40.

The robbers, riding in a sedan, forced the cab to the curb at Thirtieth and Lynch streets. Two of them, carrying revolvers, got into the back seat and ordered the driver, Andrew Russell, to drive to the city limits on United States Highway 40.

There they took from Maloney the receipts from the tavern at 429 St. Louis avenue, and $3 from Russell. They also took the ignition keys of the taxicab and drove away in their sedan, in which the third robber had followed.

Robbed of $80 in his Auto
Two Men Jump on Running Board and Hold Up Driver.

Thomas Cannon, 3200 University street, was robbed of $80 at 5:45 p. m. yesterday by two men, who jumped on the running board of his automobile as he drove out of a parking lot at Grand and Delmar boulevard and forced him to drive to a nearby alley.

Cannon told police one of the robbers had a pistol. After taking his money from a billfold, the men returned the billfold, then drove off with his car, which was found later in the 2900 block of Washington.

MINNESOTA OFFERS VARIED FISHING CONDITIONS TO ANGLER

The vacationist who chooses a fishing holiday will find many kinds of fishing conditions in Minnesota's thousands of lakes and streams. Many species of fish have been planted in its waters and the long open season allows the fisherman to take full advantage of the conditions.

July is said to be an excellent time for taking brook trout with flies while during the last half of August the northern shore of Lake Superior provides sport for the angler with the brook trout coming up into the mouths of the streams nearby before daybreak and at dusk. According to old-timers, weather conditions must be right for successful trout fishing. The lake must be calm and since the water is very clear trout detect even the slightest movement. This is why early morning and evening are considered the best time to take them.

The open season for muskellunge, one of the most popular of Minnesota fish, is from May 15 to Feb. 15. The muskie is found in the northern and western lakes in the State and is much sought after, since it grows to enormous size and puts up a good fight when hooked.

For a game fisherman in the State are looking to the fall hunting season. More than 1000 pheasant hens are producing eggs at the Madella State Farm and it is expected that more than 24,000 pheasants will be raised this year. At the Carlos

HOW GREAT IS LOUIS? Sports Editor Wray Analyzes Joe's Strong and Weak Points

By John E. Wray Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, July 1. Applying the Yardstick.

Tony Galento, fighting his way to the threshold of a world championship, monopolized the attention and sympathies of all of us, while his epic struggle against Louis was in progress. But after the surprise and tumult had died down and the realization comes to us that Galento, after all, was just a tired and game old fellow with a sock or two left in his bear-like arms, we find time to think about Joe Louis.

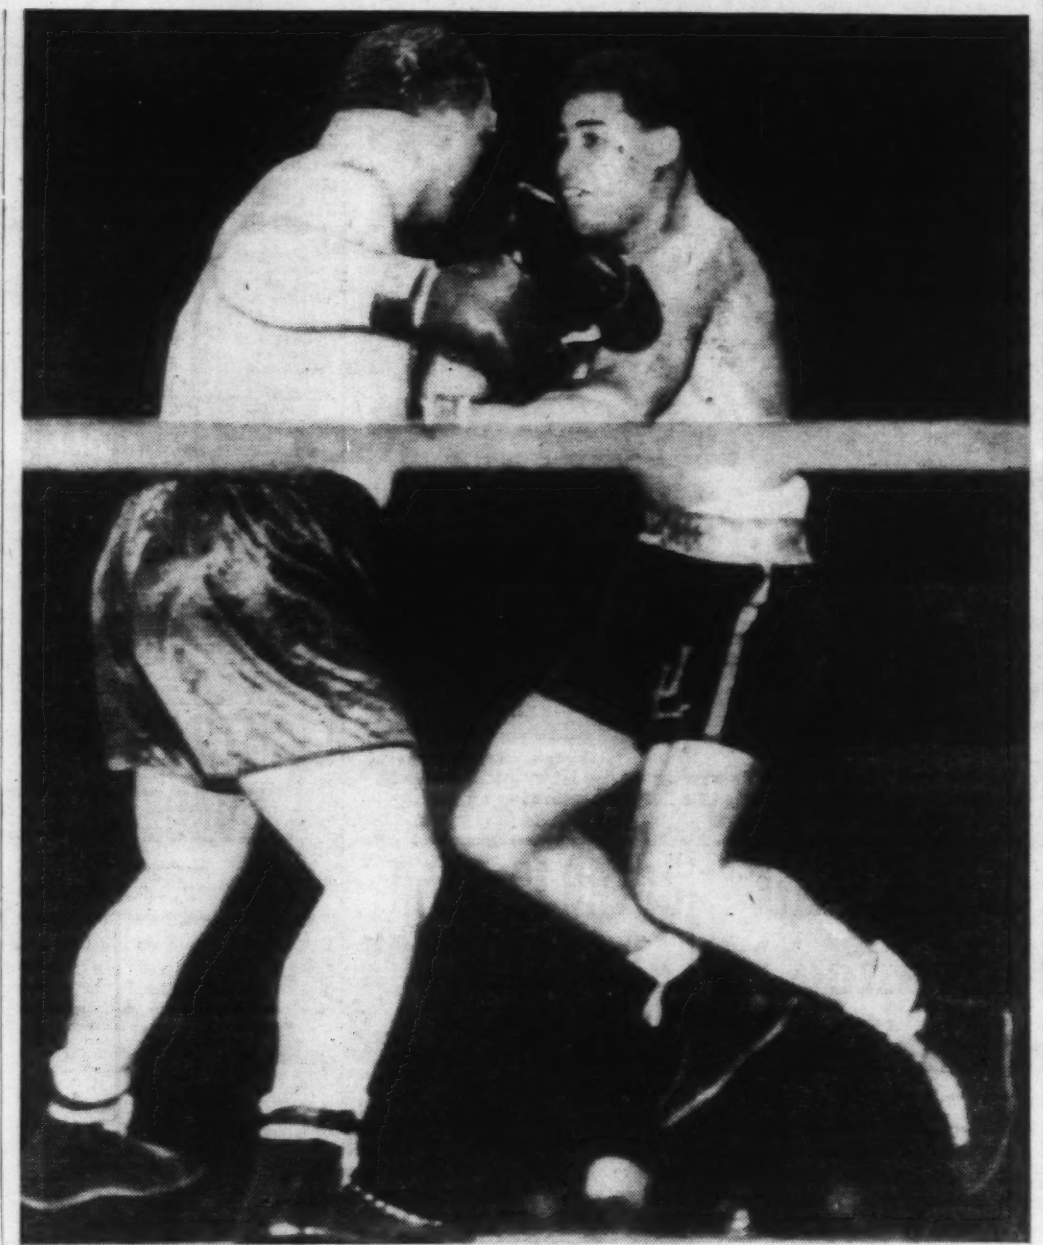

For the first time since he became champion, observers have had a chance to see Louis under fire; they got his reactions to punishment and unlimited gameness in his foe.

He Measures Up. You like a battler who can give it.

Everyone loves a fighter who can give it. And the final measure of appreciation goes to the man who can get up from the canvas and win. Louis fulfilled all three conditions. He took the heavy hooks of Galento, although staggered, without losing his fighting pose. He was beaten to the floor, punished with one of the most savage attacks this observer has witnessed in years.

Where Does He Rank? Well, that's up to your personal guess. The pages of history are open for all to read. Interpretation of this is a matter of individual appreciation.

Base-Clearing Double. The Indians then routed Kramer in the fourth. With one out, Grimes

JOE KNOWS ALL THE ROADS—EVEN THE HIGH ROAD. Champion Joe Louis had both feet off the floor when this photograph was made in the third round of his bout with Tony Galento last Wednesday night. He is landing a left and has his right ready to follow up. And his chin is open for a right-hand punch!

the way of offense or defense; and yet he permitted a fighter obviously no boxer, slow of foot, one who had almost to stand on tiptoe in aiming at Louis' chin, to land repeatedly to head and body.

It is even possible that Joe's victory was due to the exhaustion of his elderly opponent rather than to his own super-ability. For, as long as Tony was still strong, he took most of the play away from Louis.

That the fight ended on schedule seems to prove that Louis was going along just as expected; but you can't convince this writer that the men in his corner expected him to take such punishment. The look on Trainer Jack Blackburn's face alone would have told the story of the surprise and even dismay of the Louis backers at Tony's success in reaching the champion's so-called glass jaw.

With this in mind, Louis doesn't stand up with some of the great men of the past. He might not have been able to catch up with the fleet Corbett; he would have been outmanned by the crafty Fitzsimmons, himself a deadly puncher; the ponderous Jeffries might have been a target for Louis but he still was too big and tough; Jack Johnson might have tied up Louis and made him appear helpless—and, incidentally, this fight might have been a flop because both were counter punchers.

Willard, Joe would have slain quickly, as did Dempsey. Gene Tunney might have outsmarted

Louis, but he lacked the lethal weapons to kill this lightning hitter.

Louis vs. Dempsey. And that brings us down to the Mighty Mauler, the man who couldn't box much but who in his prime was hard to stop.

Louis showed some gameness in fighting Galento, but the master exhibition of "taking it" still rests with Dempsey, and in more than one fight.

One of course, was the battle with Firpo, when the champion was knocked around, in and out of the ring, but came back to win in the second round.

Dempsey was young and good then. His real test of fortitude came when he battled Jack Sharkey, following his first defeat by Tunney.

Anyone who saw that battle can't forget the punishment Dempsey took. In the first round from side to side, up and down, and belted him in the waistline until friends of the Mauler turned their heads away, unwilling to look at it. His face was bloated and bruised from punishment. He tottered to his corner after round one.

"Poor Jack! It's the end of a great fighter," everyone felt. For four more rounds Dempsey took the same ferocious slugging—just a punching bag for Sharkey.

Then the Sailor's arms began to weaken. So did his spirit. He couldn't understand the thing in front of him that wouldn't go down, that refused to quit boring in for more punches. Finally, in the seventh round, Sharkey's strength or his courage, or something gave out. He began to complain. He turned his head to the referee to tell him about it—

Bang! One to the midriff. Bang! Another to the jaw. Sharkey sank to the canvas—finished.

That was the greatest uphill fight this writer ever saw.

Battle of the Century. And, the great "if" match of the world, the real battle of the century, would occur if it were possible to bring together Louis and Dempsey, each in his prime.

Here are two destructive hitters, both lightning fast with their gloves. Dempsey would win, and offsetting this with a fighting heart and an ability to take punishment unequalled in history.

Too bad we can't turn back time and make Dempsey young again. The million dollar gate would return.

Who would win? Now, boy, we've quit going out on that limb. After the shock of the first Louis-Schmeling bout, and the scare of the Galento-Louis affair, this business of expertizing is out.

Let's call it guessing, in future. What's that? We haven't classified Louis among the all-time champions? Well, we will now. He belongs somewhere among them; but where? To make it easy for ourselves, we'll say somewhere between Sullivan and Dempsey.

MC CARTHY WILL LEAD AMERICAN ALL-STAR TEAM

CHICAGO, July 1 (AP).—The illness and injury "jinx" hit the American League All-Star team again today as Connie Mack—suffering from a stomach ailment—withdraws as pilot of the squad which will meet the National League All-Stars July 11 at New York.

Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, will take over in place of the 76-year-old pilot of the Philadelphia Athletics. Mack, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, was honored this year in the sport's centennial—by being named pilot of the All-League team, even though the post usually has gone to the pilot of the circuit's champions.

Mack asked President William Harridge today that he be relieved of the job because of the strain it might entail. He has been confined to his Boston hotel since Thursday. McCarthy filled in for Mack in 1936 and also managed the American League in 1937 and 1938.

Lou Gehrig Named as Captain. Harridge also announced that Lou Gehrig, former Yankee star now out of active competition because of illness, will be on the squad—as captain. Gehrig played and starred in all six previous inter-league games, as did Detroit's Charley Gehringer, who will not play because of a leg injury. In addition, Jimmy Foss, the league's leading hitter, is ill and may not be in top shape for the contest, and George Case, Washington outfielder, is nursing an injured knee and ankle.

Even though a few players are not in peak condition, the squad apparently will have plenty of batting punch and pitching strength. Joe DiMaggio of New York is hanging the ball at a 413 clip through Friday, and Bill Dickey, New York; Roger Cramer, Boston, and Joe Gordon, New York, were all among the circuit's leading sluggers.

Records of Players. Here was the won and lost record of the pitching staff through Friday's games: Bob Grove, Boston, 7-2; Ted Lyons, Chicago, 8-1; Bob Feller, Cleveland, 6-1; Red Evers, Detroit, 10-1; Red Ruffing, New York, 12-2; Lefty Gomez, New York, 6-2; John Murphy, New York, 1-2; and Buck Newson, Detroit, 8-5.

The remainder of the squad: Catchers—Dickey, Frank Hayes, Philadelphia; Rolfe Hemsley, Cleveland.

Infielders—Hank Greenberg, Detroit; Foss; George McQuinn, St. Louis; Gordon; Joe Croft, Boston; Frank Crosetti, Red Sox; New York; Luke Appling, Chicago.

Outfielders—DiMaggio; Case; Cramer; George Selkirk, New York; Myril Hoag, St. Louis; Bob Johnson, Philadelphia.

CONNIE MACK SERIOUSLY ILL, PHYSICIAN SAYS

BOSTON, July 1 (AP).—Described by his physician as being "very seriously ill," Connie Mack, 76-year-old manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, was taken aboard a train tonight bound for his home in Philadelphia.

Mack, who was stricken last Thursday by what physicians described as an acute attack of indigestion, was accompanied by his wife and his daughter, Mary.

He was carried in a stretcher down the service elevator of the hotel, where he has been confined for three days, treated in an ambulance to South Station, and placed aboard a train.

The whole maneuver was carried out in secrecy, and railroad police kept away the curious.

Dr. Eddie O'Brien, club physician of the Boston Red Sox, who has been treating the veteran baseball leader, described him as being "seriously ill."

"I am unable to discuss the case further," he said, "except to say that he went back to Philadelphia at his own request."

Mrs. Mack, who came here last night from Germantown, Pa., to occupy a room next to her husband's, said Mack had spent the day in bed resting and conserving his strength for the homeward trip.

During Mack's illness, the Athletics have been handled by his son, Earl.

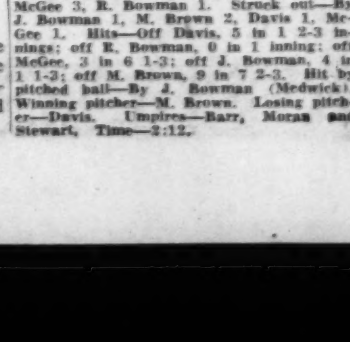

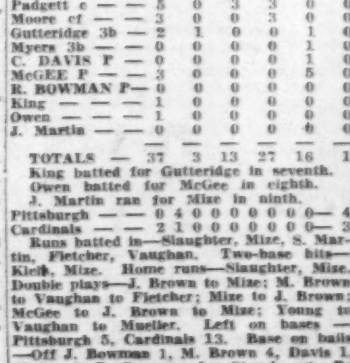

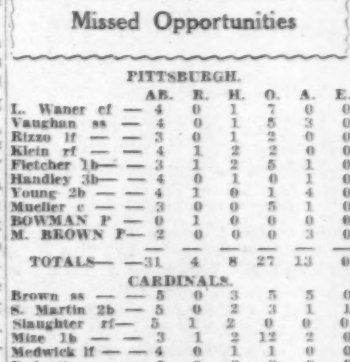

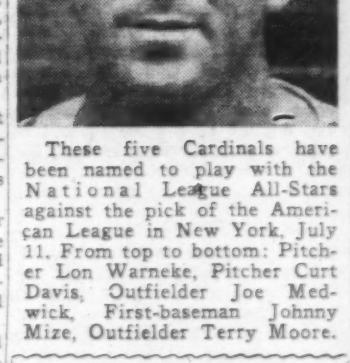

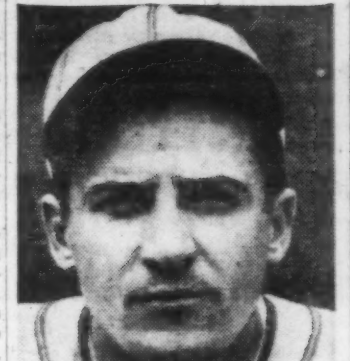

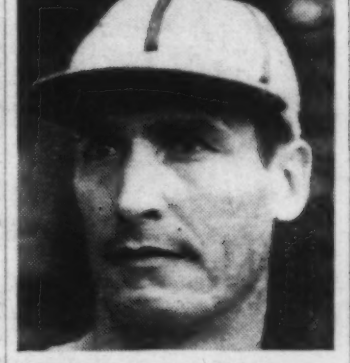

Soccer Association RE-ELECTS CALLOWHILL

DETROIT, July 1 (AP).—The United States Football (Soccer) Association today re-elected Howard Callowhill, of Baltimore, president and chose Milwaukee for its 1940 meeting.

William Angus, of Cleveland, was re-elected treasurer and the following were chosen vice-presidents: Thomas E. Sager, Holmesburg, Pa.; Harry Fairfield, Pittsburgh; and Harold Krause, New York.

Cup Match Postponed. MEXICO CITY, July 1 (AP).—The Davis Cup doubles match in the Australia-Mexico series was postponed today because of rain and rescheduled for tomorrow.

REDBIRDS CHOSEN FOR ALL-STAR TEAM

BIRDS' FIFTH LOSS IN SIX GAMES; DAVIS BATTED OUT

McGee's Good Pitching in Vain After Traynor's Men Score Four in Second—Mize and Slaughter Hit Homers.

By J. Roy Stockton

Bill McGee, the old fiddler from Bathtown, Ill., and Bob Bowman, the West Virginia whistler, blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates for seven and one-third innings at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon, holding Pie Traynor's recently-improved Buccaners to three hits, but it was all in vain.

Before Manager Ray Blades of the Redbirds called on McGee to take over the hurling job, the Pirates had pounded Curt Davis for five hits and four runs and those tallies were enough to give the Buccos a victory, 4 to 3.

The defeat dropped the Cardinals a game farther behind the leading Reds and the second place Giants, but a fall to fourth place was avoided because the Reds took the measure of the Cubs, who therefore remained half a game behind St. Louis.

Davis, making his twenty-fourth appearance of the season on the hill for the Cardinals, was plainly not in his best form. Usually a master of control, he was unable to put the ball where he wanted it. So poorly was the right arm doing the bidding of the hard-working son of Greenfield, Mo., that he even walked Pitcher Joe Bowman during the second-inning Pirate rally and when the next two batters singled, Blades decided that it was time to relieve Davis.

Redbirds Out in Front. In the first inning, Davis disposed of Lloyd Waner, Arky Vaughan and Johnny Rizzo quickly, and the Cardinals took a two-run lead on four-baggers by Enos Slaughter and Johnny Mize, Slaughter hitting to the pavilion roof for his third circuit drive of the season, all produced during the week, and Mize clearing the screen above the pavilion roof for his twelfth of the year.

And then the Pirates took command. "Chuck Klein, recently signed by the Buccaners when he was cast adrift by the Phillies, opened the drive with a double to right and Fletcher scored Klein with a single to center. Handley singled Fletcher to second, and when Young forced Handley at second and Stuart Martin made a wild throw, trying for a double play, Fletcher scored and Young reached second. Mueller took a called third strike, but Joe Bowman walked. Lloyd Waner walked to score Young and Vaughan's single drove Bowman home.

Bill McGee then took over the pitching assignment and during the remainder of the game, as told, the Pirates made only three hits, Bob Bowman hurling a hitting line after McGee retired for a pinch-hitter.

The Pirates had enough runs, however, as after the Cardinals put over their third tally in the second inning, they were unable to solve the delivery of Mace Brown, who, though a bit wild, had something in emergencies.

End of Scoring. Guttridge walked to start the St. Louis second and after McGee struck out Jimmy Brown singled to right and Traynor called on Mace Brown to relieve Joe Bowman. Stuart Martin's single to right scored Guttridge, but that was the end of the scoring for the day.

The Cardinals had a fine opportunity in the ninth inning, but an unfortunate base running nipped a promising rally. Johnny Mize opened the frame with a hit to center and turned it into a double by daring—almost too daring—base running. Pepper Martin ran for Mize and on Medwick's single off Young's glove, Pepper reached third. Padgett followed with a sharp grounder to Young, who saw out of the corner of his eye that Mize was racing for home and who, though a bit wild, had something in emergencies.

So threw to Vaughan, forcing Medwick. Pepper then decided to try for the score, but Vaughan's relay to Mueller nipped the Wild Horse at the plate to complete a double play that assured the Pirates

DERRINGER TO TRY TO ARRANGE TO PLAY IN YANKEE STADIUM

CHICAGO, July 1 (AP).—Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Reds hurler, nominated for the all-star baseball game at Yankee Stadium July 11, will appear in the lineup if legal complications are ironed out before July 7, General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Reds indicated today.

Giles wired President Ford Frick of the National League as follows: "Notice Derringer's selection for all-star game. If legal situation is such that he can appear without exposing himself to arrest or other embarrassment, will be glad to have him appear. Otherwise we will notify you not later than July 7 so you may have substitution."

Derringer remained away the last time the Reds played in New York. An assault judgment for $375 has been ignored by the pitcher and the New York courts have cited him for contempt and issued a warrant for his arrest unless the judgment is satisfied.

Abandoned as Home for Children

The Episcopal Home for Children, at 1711 South Grand boulevard.

EPISCOPAL ORPHANAGE OUTMODDED, IS CLOSED

The Episcopal Home for Children, a landmark at Grand boulevard and Lafayette avenue for 65 years, has been closed and its charges placed in selected foster homes for a year while plans are prepared for a future child guidance program under modern methods.
When the home, a roomy three-story brick structure topped by a cupola, was completed in 1874 on a site donated by the late Henry Shaw, it was regarded as an advantageously located in the suburbs. But the city has long since grown up around it, the building has become outmoded and child guidance methods have altered radically.
So the premises are for sale and 12 children, who had been quartered in a fireproof wing, have been placed in foster homes under the supervision of a social service case worker.

The work of the Episcopal home organization, which began in 1845 in a room on Spruce street near Tenth, will be continued. Should a new home be erected a less congested area will be chosen.
Future plans of the organization, which is headed by Mrs. Walter Fiesel, will not be perfected until completion of a study of the situation in St. Louis for the care and psychiatric treatment of children. For the last four years the home has devoted itself to the care of the "problem child."

The study will be undertaken with the co-operation of the Children's Aid Society, the Department of Neuro-Psychiatry of the Washington University School of Medicine and the Social Planning Council. No more children will be accepted for care during the next 12 months.
Test Suit Over Tract.
The site for the home, a shaded lot 40 by 175 feet, was given by Shaw in 1867. His will provided that if the property ceased to be used as an orphanage it should revert to the city, although the original deed stipulated it should revert to the Shaw heirs. But in 1930 the homecounted successfully in a test suit against trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden that the clause applied to the property since the intention of the gift had been fulfilled, the property had been enhanced greatly in value and more suitable sites were available.
Before erection of the building at 1711 South Grand boulevard, the home was located at various places. In 1849, when it was at Eleventh and North Market streets, four children and the matron succumbed to a cholera epidemic which swept the city.

Shortly afterwards a new home was built on what was then the Natural Bridge Plank Road. The initial donation was made by Jenny Lind and P. T. Barnum.

TWO MEN SENTENCED TO JAIL FOR HAVING UNTAXED ALCOHOL

Negroes Indicted With Former Bondsman Get 18 Months on Guilty Pleas.
Dan Ricks and William E. Richard, Negroes, were sentenced to 18 months in the penitentiary yesterday by United States District Judge Charles B. Davis on their pleas of guilty of possession of untaxed alcohol. They were jointly indicted with Harry W. Repple, former professional bondsman, his wife, two daughters, and three others, who are awaiting trial.
Assistant District Attorney Arthur A. Hapke told the Court that Ricks was reselling untaxed liquor he purchased from Repple. Richard, Hapke said, was paid 50 cents for each five-gallon can of spirits he delivered. At the time of his arrest he possessed 25 gallons. Ricks lived at 1010 North Compton avenue, and Richard at 3431 Market street.

BILL TO LET ST. CLAIR COUNTY SET EADS BRIDGE TAX LOSSES

State Senate Refuses to Take Assessment Authority From Illinois Commission.
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 1.—A bill to permit St. Clair County instead of the Illinois Tax Commission to assess the east approach of Eads Bridge for taxes failed of passage in the Senate last night. Although the vote was 22 to 5 in favor of the bill, this was four votes short of the number required for passage.
Assessments were made by the county until the Legislature gave this power to the tax commission in 1937. The last assessment by the county was $2,000,000.
Last year the County Board of Review disputed the right of the commission to fix the value, asserting that the commission apparently had reduced the assessment to $206,000 by lumping the bridge with other railroad property of the owner, the Terminal Railroad Association.

WHAT A
TEN YEARS CAN MAKE!
At some time or other, all of us have seen homes that are remarkably well-preserved for their age, and others that seem unusually dilapidated. Have you ever wondered just what the basic reason was?
Aside from the care which is given a piece of property, one of the most important factors which preserve or depreciate it is the lumber from which it is built.
Wet lumber shrinks, causing plaster cracks, uneven floors, loose joints and sticking windows.
Dry, treated, stabilized lumber helps guarantee rigidity and permanent beauty. Ask for and demand this type of lumber. It's sold by Goodfellow Lumber Company.

WASHINGTON U. TO ERECT BUILDING
FOR GEN. ELECTRIC
New Structure, to Be Occupied Under 20-Year Lease, Will Stand at Northeast Corner of Locust and Beaumont.

Washington University is to erect a modern fireproof Mercantile building at the northeast corner of Locust street and Beaumont avenue for the General Electric Supply Corporation, which will occupy it under a 20-year lease. Now vacant, the site has a frontage on Locust street of 175 feet by a depth of 135 feet on Beaumont.
Comprising approximately 45,000 square feet of floor space, the building will be full two stories and basement in height. It will be 150 by 100 feet in dimensions, with entrances on both streets. Construction will be of reinforced concrete, with sprinkler system. Exterior walls will be faced with a full range matt brick, topped with a stone coping. Plate glass show windows will be used on the first floor street fronts, and steel casement windows on the second floor. The roof will be composition.

Main Floor Quarters.
The main floor will have a sales room with an asphalt tile floor, with adjoining stock room and service department with a cement floor. The remaining space will be divided into a large warehouse area, with a loading room, shipping clerk's office, freight elevators, toilet and locker rooms.
There will be a parking area on Beaumont avenue and a parking and loading area on the alley.
Both general and private offices will be on this floor. The remaining space will consist of display room, meeting room, warehouse area, two storage rooms and two toilet and locker rooms. Linoleum floors will be used in all but the warehouse and storage areas. The office section will be air-cooled.
The structure will be heated by a direct steam system which will

City and County Residences Acquired

Residence at 30 Westmoreland Place recently purchased by Calvin F. Gatch, secretary-treasurer of Gatch Bros., Jordan & McKinney, Inc., brokers, from the Mary Lionberger estate. Negotiations were handled by Mary Potter Love, Inc.

Residence on the east side of Ballas road about 800 feet north of Conway road in St. Louis County purchased last week by Israel Lewis Carp, vice-president of Carp, Inc., through Edward L. Bakewell.

Plans for the building were prepared by Preston J. Erachaw, architect, to conform with the requirements of the lessee. The construction contract was awarded to the Gamble Construction Co. It is expected to be ready for occupancy this fall. M. F. Marks is engineer.
Pending Year or More.
A. H. Shirley, local manager of the General Electric Supply Corporation, participated in the negotiations for the lease with Isaac A. Hedges representing the Washington University. The project has been under consideration by the Washington University for a year or more.
The site was formerly occupied by a four-story educational building, erected in 1878 for the Mary Institute, which in 1900 moved to Lake and Waterman avenue, and which is now housed in a modern structure at the northwest corner of Watson and Ladue roads.
The General Electric Supply Corporation is now a tenant of a building at the southeast corner of Seventh and Elm streets, owned by the Washington University.

TWO LOCUST STREET BUILDINGS ACQUIRED

Property at 2307-09 and at 3327-29 Purchased for Business Purposes.
A three-story commercial building at 2307-09 Locust street, owned by the Pevely Dairy Co., was purchased last week by the Advance Realty Co., a holding company of the Advance Sales Co., a shoe jobbing supply concern, of which C. A. Snodgrass is president. It occupies a lot 50 by 109 feet.
Plans in connection with the purchase have not been disclosed. Snodgrass also heads the Advance Sales Co., and the Advance Counter Co. The Advance Realty Co. was recently incorporated to take title to the property.
Formerly occupied by a relief organization, the building was purchased several years ago by the Pevely company, headed by Daniel C. Kerckhoff, as a speculative investment.
Another business building to change hands last week was that at 3327-29 Locust street, occupying a lot 45 by 109 feet. The purchaser of record was Mary Claire Forristell.
The seller was the Motors Realty and Investment Co., a holding company of which L. C. Post is president. Post is a vice-president of the St. Louis Union Trust Co.
These acquisitions follow in the wake of several large purchases on Locust street, formerly one of the most buoyant sections of the real estate market.
They included, notably the four-story commercial building at the northwest corner of Locust street and Leffingwell purchased by the Comfort Printing and Stationery Co. from interests represented by the Hennelmann-Speckler Real Estate Co. and the three-story business building at 2100 Locust street, acquired by John F. Swift, Inc., printers and lithographers, from the Lafayette South Side Bank and Trust Co., now being liquidated through the Manufacturers Bank & Trust Co. In the latter instances the purchasers were presented by the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co.

SALE OF FACTORY BUILDING FOR $31,500 AUTHORIZED

Court Approves Trustees' Plan to Sell 5-Story Structure Owned by First National Co.
Trustees of the First National Co. guaranteed first mortgage participation certificates obtained authority from Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley yesterday to sell a five-story factory and warehouse building at the southwest corner of Seventeenth street and Delmar boulevard for $31,500.
The trustees held a $35,000 mortgage against the property and acquired it at a foreclosure in 1935. Of the purchase price, $12,600 is to be in cash and the balance represented by a first deed of trust to be guaranteed by Ben Steinbach and a lease on the building executed by the Missouri Flower & Feather Co.
The property was formerly appraised at $68,000 and is assessed at $51,290.

GREYHOUND LINES BUY SITE FOR BUS TERMINAL, GARAGE

As a site for a bus terminal and garage, the Greyhound Lines have purchased a vacant tract 133 by 270 feet on the east side of Hadley street, between Cass avenue and Mullinphy street. The site extends through the block with second frontage of 133 feet on Eleventh.
Plans are under way for the erection of a modern one-story fireproof building 125 by 200 feet in dimensions. Construction is scheduled to start at an early date.
Arthur S. Martin & Son acted for the Greyhound interests in the negotiations. The Hadley street frontage of the tract was owned by the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co. in the negotiations. The Eleventh street frontage was owned by the Lueking heirs, represented by O. J. Osterman.

GASEN'S DRUGS INC. LEASES DELMAR-UNION CORNER

With plans for a drug store on a pretentious scale, Gasen's Drug Stores, Inc., has leased the building at the southeast corner of Delmar and Union boulevards.
With the new unit the concern will have a chain of 20 stores in operation in St. Louis. The Delmar-Union store will feature super camera, luncheonette, liquor and drug departments.
The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. handled the negotiations on behalf of the drug concern.

FORMER SOUTH SIDE PHONE BUILDING SOLD

Pen Company Acquires Old Victor Exchange Structure at Indiana and Ann Aves.

The former Victor Exchange Building at the southwest corner of Indiana and Ann avenues, has been purchased by the Joseph Lipic Pen Co. from the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.
Two stories in height, exclusive of finished basement, the building is of fireproof construction with steel frame. It contains approximately 10,000 square feet of floor space.
The second floor is one large room of 3500 square feet, untrammelled by pillars or posts. The ceiling is 15 feet high, with adjustable ventilators and is covered with copper and glass skylights. There are large rest rooms on the second and first floors, with shower baths.
There is a large canopied entrance on the south side of the building, with a receiving entrance in the rear at the corner of the building. The site has a frontage on Ann of 128 feet by a depth of 55 feet on Indiana.
The building will be occupied by the pen company's factory, now at 906-08 South Twelfth street. The concern's retail store will remain at its present location at 811 Locust street. It manufactures pens, fountain pens, pencils, etc.
The building acquired was originally owned by the Kinloch Telephone Co., which was absorbed by the Southwestern Bell System. Since 1935 it has been used by the Southwestern as a warehouse for equipment.
Negotiations are pending for several other buildings formerly occupied by the Southwestern Bell System. Including those at 4400 Delmar, 1625 South Grand and at the northwest corner of Fair and Carter avenues, as reported by R. M. Moss, supervisor of real estate for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

D'Oench Co. Loan Correspondent.
The Ralph D'Oench Co. has been appointed mortgage loan correspondent for the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Springfield, Mass., and the Ohio National Life Insurance Co. of Cincinnati, O. FHA loans as well as other loans will be arranged and serviced by the D'Oench Co. on St. Louis City and county properties.

Dr. J. M. Smith, Louisiana U. Head, Facing Embezzlement Charges, Rose From Humble Start on Farm

Hoarded Nickels to Win Scholastic Degrees, Found Favor With Huey Long, Then Flung His Honors Away.

By MEIGS O. FROST

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, July 1.

THE career of a Louisiana farm boy spent nearly 40 years building, went crashing to the ground in ruins when Dr. James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State University, fled with his wife from his native State where he had risen to fame and wealth. He is charged with $100,000 embezzlement of Louisiana State University funds, and rewarded of $2750 has been offered for him. The actual shortage in the funds he controlled is reported by high State officials, now feverishly sponsoring an audit on the books, as somewhere between $500,000 and $1,000,000. The scandal is rocking all Louisiana on its heels.

It is the story of a country school teacher who didn't know when to stop. He won wealth and honor beyond the wildest dreams of his youth, lost his head in the swirl of it all and turned high financier and heavy socialite. His closest friends of the days before he fled shake their heads sadly at the needlessness of it.

What Smith Flung Away.
For Dr. Smith was president of a $15,000,000 State university. His salary was $18,000 a year. He lived with his wife and two children in a luxurious new air-conditioned mansion, the president's house on the campus, rent free. He drove a costly car provided by the university. He was a Knight of the Legion of Honor of France. He was a commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy. He was a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

And he flung it all away, as many a man has flung away high position, high honors, more than comfortable living, at the demand of some insatiable urge, coupled, many believe, by high pressure of associates not yet publicly branded with the same stigma, but driven by the same insatiable passion for power and wealth.

James Monroe Smith was born on a bare little North Louisiana farm, amid the red clay piny hills of Jackson Parish, Oct. 9, 1888. He was the son of John Henry Smith and Mary Adney Sims Smith. He learned his letters in a country schoolhouse—a little one-room shack. He grew into boyhood doing the countless chores of a barefooted farm boy. His feet were splayed from contact with hard clay, from wearing heavy farm work shoes. His hands were tough and calloused. His big-boned frame grew tall and gaunt and gangling. He said once that he never could remember in all his boyhood owning a suit of clothes that came within a mile of fitting him.

Qualities as Teacher.
But a burning ambition flamed in him, as it has flamed in so many American farm boys. He vowed to himself he wouldn't spend his life tilling and sowing bare clay acres of cotton and corn, slopping the hogs, milking cows, shoveling manure, feeding chickens. He vowed he would get an education somehow, and get somewhere.

He finished his primary education, his high school education, in the country district schools of Jackson Parish and Ouachita Parish in North Louisiana. He worked his way. When he left his farm home to go to school in Ouachita Parish, he had one silver quarter, in the pocket of his badly fitting trousers. And by hard work and hard study, he qualified himself to be a country school teacher.

Those savings bore dividends when James Monroe Smith went to the University of Chicago for one year, then to the Teachers' College of Columbia University in New York City, specialized on courses for educators in the technique and history and philosophy of teaching and emerged in 1925 with his Master of Arts degree from the Teachers' College of Columbia University, following this with his degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Columbia in 1927.

He was a member of three fraternities, Phi Kappa Pi, Phi Delta Kappa and Phi Kappa Delta. He had been a member of the student council of Columbia University in 1924 and 1925 and president of the Phi Kappa Delta chapter.

WASHINGTON, July 1.

A part of the publicity build-up of Vice-President Garner for the Democratic National Convention in 1940, his Texas friends are announcing that he will be presented to the party not as a New Dealer, not as a middle-of-the-roader, not as a conservative, but as a Democrat with a "militant liberal" record over a period of 38 years in national government.

There is still some doubt whether the Vice-President regards himself as a bona fide candidate for the presidency—he will be 71 years old in November—or as a political trader who wants to go to the convention with several hundred delegates pledged to his candidacy to be used to block the nomination of President Roosevelt's choice or even the third nomination of President Roosevelt.

Garner has not said a word publicly about his candidacy and until he does, the voters, particularly the Democrats, must rely on the declarations of his supporters as to his ultimate intentions. These supporters insist his name will be kept before the convention even if Mr. Roosevelt seeks a third term.

Evidence Pro and Con
In His Votes and Bills

Garner's legislative voting record, however, is public property, and while his most effective work has been and is in the committee rooms and corridors of the House and Senate, it reveals much of his political philosophy. Whether he was and is a "militant liberal" is a proper subject of debate, with substantiating evidence on both sides of the question. Ardent New Dealers deny that he deserves the name of liberal and call him the Republicans' choice for the Democratic presidential nomination; conservative Democrats, especially those from the South, consider him one of their favored group; many Senators, Representatives and political writers, while respecting his shrewdness and smooth political tactics, insist he is an expert at hopping on the bandwagon at the most opportune time and at marching under triumphal arches erected by other men; old time progressives remember his help on the Norris Muscle Shoals bills, the Norris "lame duck" amendment, and his spectacular and successful fight against the Mellon tax bill in 1924.

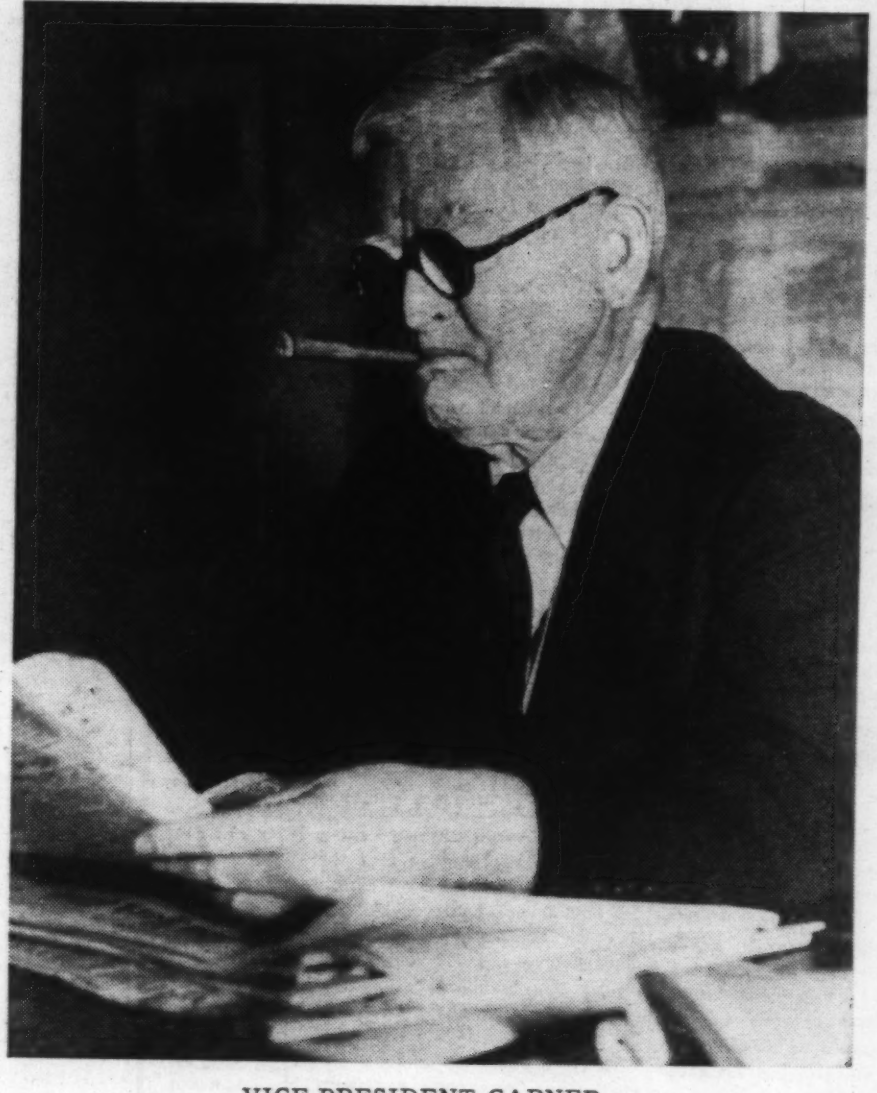

For the ordinary voter, to whom parliamentary practice is an incoherent and uninteresting puzzle, Garner has developed into an almost legendary political figure, a colorful frontiersman of blunt and earthy speech, who can match wits with the best in Washington, including Presidents, and who can show his irreverence for royalty by slapping King George VI on the back. To such ordinary citizen, Garner's legislative record, like that of many other outstanding politicians, is taken on faith in the belief that his votes have conformed to the general mental picture. And like most political records of any length, Garner's is far from black or white, conservative, middle-of-the-road, or liberal.

An Organization Democrat
But Free to Act on Convictions

Garner has repeatedly declared that because of his "safe" district he has been free to vote his personal convictions, except when he was bound by party platform or caucus. In a speech in 1922, which he considers the most memorable in his career, he told his colleagues in the House:

"I am an organization Democrat. I never in my life cast a vote against my own judgment except I had to go along with the Democratic organization. (Applause) I have done that and I will do it again. You must have organization. We have it through committees, and it is the only way we can function in this House."

There, perhaps is one key to his legislative record. On controversial issues, he has been as "liberal" or as "conservative" as the Democratic party was, at that particular time;

VICE-PRESIDENT GARNER.

Against Woman Suffrage Amendment and Dyer Bill to Stop Lynchings

THERE are two votes which may rise to plague Garner if he is the Democratic nominee in 1940.

In 1919 he was one of the 89 Representatives voting against submission of the woman's suffrage amendment, for which there was an affirmative vote of 304.

In 1922 he joined his Southern colleagues who were in the minority on the Dyer anti-lynching bill, a purely political measure if there ever was one, but which is regarded as a test by some Negro voters.

And it might be noted that the Democratic party had taken several inconsistent positions between 1903 and 1933.

There is still another key—his solicitude for his congressional district, for the State of Texas and for his Texas colleagues in the House and Senate. He was a member of the Texas Legislature two terms for the sole purpose of creating a congressional district of his own. He made no bones about his ambition to go to Congress when the redistricting bill was up for consideration.

Coastwise Canal for Texas
And Other Bills in House

As a young man, he demonstrated his political sagacity by getting the pledges from 81 of the 131 members of the Texas House to vote for his bill. He came to Washington to attend the extra session of the Fifty-eighth Congress called in November, 1903, by Theodore Roosevelt. His first vote was for John Sharp Williams of Mississippi for Speaker, an empty gesture because the Republicans were in control of the House. His committee assignments were of the lowliest. He was named to Railways and Canals and Expenditures in the State Department. Not once during this session did he make a speech, but he introduced three bills, one for a public building at Eagle Pass, Tex., another for a survey of the channel of Aransas Pass in Texas, and third to enlarge the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims. None was enacted at that session.

At the next session, he reported for his Railways and Canals Committee, his own bill providing for a coastwise canal in Texas. It was several years before this bill was finally enacted, and it may be a coincidence that one of his original supporters for the 1940 presidential nomination was Roy Miller of Corpus Christi, lobbyist for the intercoastal canal and the Texas sulphur interests.

In the next Congress, he introduced a bill creating a new division of the Western Judicial District of Texas, and to provide a term of court at Del Rio. Seno E. Payne,

Washington Stiffening Attitude Toward Japan: No Surrender of American Treaty Rights in China

State Department Prepares to Publish Official Reports on Outrages on Citizens—Mikado's Navy Frankly Worried.

By CONSTANTINE BROWN

WASHINGTON, July 1.

THE United States Government is clearing the decks for action in the Far East. For the time being, action will be restricted to a strong diplomatic attitude, leaving Japan in no uncertainty of what this Government will do if the Japanese military interfere with American treaty rights in China. Ambassador Kenseku Horinouchi only recently was told in plain language by Secretary of State Hull that this Government will brook no interference. The Ambassador was diplomatically informed that the old game of the Tokyo Foreign Office, pleading ignorance and apologizing for the deeds of the military on the Asiatic mainland, was a thing of the past.

Meantime the State Department has decided to publish, at an early date, the reports of the United States consular and diplomatic agents in China dealing with outrages perpetrated on American citizens by the Japanese soldiery since the fall of Nanking. The Embassy at Tokyo, following customary diplomatic routine, asked Japan's permission to publish the correspondence between the two governments, but the Tokyo Government indicated that it would rather leave that exchange of notes unpublished. Therefore, the State Department considers itself free to give to the American public the contents of the reports of the consular officers from various parts of China.

Reason for the Decision.
These have been kept strictly confidential because they are said to contain such indignities that their publication would have aroused public opinion at a time when the administration believed that our relations with Japan could be mended. At this time the State Department is convinced that despite the pleasant attitude of the Japanese toward the American citizens in Tientsin, we will eventually have to share the fate of other Western nations. Because of this conviction it has decided to let the public judge how conciliatory the administration has been in its dealings with the Japanese.

Since Wednesday, June 21, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States forces in the Far East, has been given instructions to deal sternly with any attempt on the part of the Japanese to interfere with the treaty rights of American citizens in the Chinese ports which are now under Japanese domination. For some time Yarnell was considered a fire-eater by the State Department, and his immediate superiors in Washington have been asked more than once by the State Department to curb Yarnell's impulses. These were merely the impulses of a naval officer who is asked to do a job on the basis of rules which have been in effect for the last 50 years. Yarnell had to accept certain things which he considered humiliations because he was told that if he went as far as he desired he would have the backing of the State Department.

Texas cattle were also his particular concern. In the '20s, he voted against a bill to regulate the shipment of cattle infected with "Texas" or splenic fever. The bill passed 307 to 26.

There are two votes which may rise to plague Garner if he is the Democratic nominee. In 1919 he was one of the 89 Representatives voting against submission of the woman's suffrage amendment for which there was an affirmative vote of 304, and in 1922, he joined his Southern colleagues who were in the minority on the Dyer anti-lynching bill, a purely political measure if there ever was one, but which is regarded as a test by some colored voters.

His Counter to Attack
On Stand on Lynching Bill

Against this vote on the anti-lynching bill, Garner is relying for what he did for the Negroes in Uvalde County, when he was a County Judge. The Texas law provided that Negroes must be given the same educational opportunities as white persons. Garner, in his dual capacity as County Judge and Superintendent of Schools, rented a shack at $2 a month and installed a young Negro teacher at $15 a month for the seven Negro children entitled to an education. At the time, he has said, establishment of this school created resentment against him from Southerners who were against the education of Negroes.

Garner has told cronies that for the first three terms he did little but cultivate the friendship of colleagues in the House and campaign in Texas for the re-election of the sitting members. In those days he was probably a term of court at Del Rio. Seno E. Payne, Meantime the Japanese navy is playing only a subordinate role. This time, however, the navy was consulted. From the purely strategic point of view, the navy could see no harm if the army decided to twist the British lion's tail once more. The Japanese admirals know that in view of the threatening conditions in Europe the Japanese navy cannot undertake an expedition to the Far East to meet the Japanese fleet. They also know that economic retributions, such as the closing of Japanese ports in Asia to Japanese goods, would constitute an act of war which would be welcomed by the Japanese sailors.

Embassador Craigie was told bluntly that the Japanese Government could not be made responsible for the inconveniences which British citizens suffer in Tientsin because of the mistakes of their own authorities; the blockade was merely a police measure taken by the military and the Tokyo Government would not interfere. But an interdiction of the selling of Japanese goods in the territories of His Britannic Majesty, the Ambassador was told, must be construed as an act of war since it would be an action undertaken by one Government against another Government. That slowed down the "stern measures" the British Cabinet had decided to take against Japan.

Worried About U. S.

But while the Japanese navy is playing only a subordinate role in the Far East, it is known in Washington that the chief of staff of the Imperial Navy went so far as to say in a Cabinet meeting that an American intervention at the present time would mean the loss of the war in China. Hence the unusual politeness of the Japanese soldiers toward anybody in Tientsin who has the red American passport; and the almost embarrassing courtesy of the Japanese toward the 250 marines who live just outside the British concession.

The war games of the United States Navy last spring were followed with a keen interest by the Japanese. Despite the official denials of the Navy Department, the nuts out of the fire for the British

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For Public Defender in Federal Courts.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A MOST significant step forward, in the proposed nationwide public defender plan, to provide competent and paid counsel for accused poor persons—under our law, presumably innocent until proved guilty—is seen in the 1939 printed report of the American Bar Association's Committee on Jurisprudence and Law Reform, in the "advance program" of the coming annual meeting in San Francisco. The first important resolution contained therein is: "Resolved, That the association approves in principle the establishment of a system of public defenders in the Federal courts."

Such recommendation, although limited in scope to the Federal courts, presages a vital change in the attitude of the organized bar toward the entire problem of justice to the poor in our criminal courts—both Federal and state. It indicates clearly that a proper defense and a fair trial must come through law—and not by favor, charity or volunteer unpaid counsel having no definite duty or responsibility to defend the accused.

Apparently, the very conservative American Bar Association, so long asleep on this vital question, is tending now to follow the lead of the Judicial Conference headed by Chief Justice Hughes, former Attorney-General Cummings, the National Lawyers' Guild, the New York State Bar Association and many other important bar and civic groups, which have approved generally the public defender principle.

"Equality before the law" must mean exactly that. Discrimination between the rich and the poor—through the present vicious assigned and unpaid counsel system or through volunteer unpaid counsel—must be supplanted by public defense.

A real democracy of justice is needed. Public defenders are now sanctioned by logic, efficiency and economy in many American communities. They have amply proved their worth. Nothing can stop their onward march.

Defends Working Wives.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I, TOO, am opposed to wives working, when the husband is able to support the family. However, we've got to admit in some instances it is necessary for the woman to work to help provide for mother or father, or, perhaps, to keep junior or sister in high school or college.

Why not declare war on the poor little debutantes who must be kept in the city as they are so bored at home or are seeking a career, even though father can give them everything their hearts desire? Take them out of the many jobs they now fill, and it would give employment to women who need the money.

Questions About the City Lobbyist.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IF Mayor Dickman needs more money to run the city, why did he employ a lobbyist at the last session of the Legislature, at a cost of $5462 for salary and expenses? Don't the legislators we send to Jefferson City represent us? If they don't represent us, why don't we cut expenses by eliminating them and just sending one lobbyist?

Of course, it may happen that our lobbyist will neglect us too. Then we will have to hire another lobbyist to plead with the head lobbyist to have the members of the State Legislature from this city do their duty.

Will the Mayor answer this: Are not the legislators elected by the city supposed to represent us? If they don't, what proof have we that the lobbyist will be any more faithful?

Isn't the cost of government great enough without sending another representative to Jefferson City at a cost of $5462?

If our lobbyist can do what the large number of legislators can't do, why not make him one of the members of the State Legislature?

I'M DUMB.

Denies Authorship of Letter.

A LETTER appeared in your editorial page Friday entitled "Novel Theory About the Bund." I wish to deny for myself and members of my family any previous knowledge of this letter and any connection with it. Our name is unique in this city. CARL BERTSCH.

One WPA Worker's Experience.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Unemployment Compensation Act was passed to help the worker. Here is how it helped us:

My husband worked on WPA when no work in private industry was available. Then he foolishly (I say foolishly advisedly) took a temporary job, working just long enough to make him eligible for unemployment compensation. He was laid off the WPA, waited seven weeks for compensation, then received it for six weeks.

It was understood that he would be reinstated at the end of this time without any red tape. That was in January. Today he is still not reinstated and has no work. As a result, our home is being broken up. We have no one to turn to, and we do not know where we will go.

The men who have made a career of the WPA are the smart ones, not the men who take private employment.

VERY BITTER.

THE DEVALUATION FIGHT.

In the controversy over his power further to devalue the dollar, it would appear that President Roosevelt is less concerned over the monetary outcome than over his possible loss of prestige through another defeat in Congress.

His charge that withdrawal of his devaluation powers plays into the hands of Wall Street hardly bears scrutiny in view of the fact that the administration is supported in this controversy by such men as Russell Leffingwell of the House of Morgan and opposed by some militantly progressive economists. The intimation that the dollar, protected by a two-billion-dollar stabilization fund and by the Government's embarrassingly large gold reserves, is open to serious raids by the speculators can be brushed aside.

Only one argument which has been made in behalf of letting the President keep the power to revalue the dollar is worth serious examination. It is argued that the existence of this power serves to deter other nations from trying to obtain an advantage in international trade by devaluing their currency in relation to the dollar. On this point, it is admitted that Great Britain is the only nation whose resort to devaluation would be of sufficient importance to tempt the United States to follow suit.

Nothing appears more certain than that the Conservative British Government will devalue again only if forced to do so by the condition of national finances or because of extensive devaluation by important competitors in world trade. If Great Britain should resort to devaluation, it would mean, for example, indirect repeal of her reciprocal trade pact with the United States. In the present condition of world affairs, it is hardly probable that the British will devalue again except under pressure so intense that the threat of corresponding devaluation on our part would not suffice to prevent it.

It will be recalled that British devaluation in 1932 came only after the most heroic efforts to forestall it through deflation—efforts so burdensome that they wrecked Ramsay MacDonald's Labor Government.

President Roosevelt speaks of our devaluation in 1934 as having been resorted to in order to aid our foreign trade, and he implies that further devaluation might be needed for the same purpose. Let us look at the results of the 1934 devaluation in terms of foreign trade. From 1934 to 1936, there was an increase in world trade, but the share of the United States, so far as exports were concerned, remained practically unchanged. The results bore out, in striking fashion, the statement made by The Nation that "the supposed 'advantages' of a devaluated currency in reducing imports and expanding exports are mythical."

If the President is genuinely interested in steps to prevent other nations from revaluing their currencies downward, he should take heed of the advice of recognized economists on every hand to revise the gold-purchasing policy which already has so dangerously weakened gold reserves abroad.

The United States now has 60 per cent of the world's monetary gold. Instead of continuing to attract all the gold of the planet, we should adopt policies which would permit transfusions from our existing supply of gold into the world's trade stream. If we continue to enlarge our corner on the world's gold, foreign nations will be put under pressure to devalue again, and no threat of compensatory devaluation on our part is likely to prevent it.

President Roosevelt may yet win his fight for the devaluation power. But if so, it may be credited to his ability to enforce discipline in the Democratic majority and not because he has convinced either Congress or the public that it is sound monetary policy.

ENFORCE THE FIREWORKS ORDINANCE.

ST. LOUIS' rate of injuries from fireworks accidents was the highest among the country's principal cities, a survey by the American Medical Association showed in 1937. It was to cut down the shocking toll of burns, mutilations and blinded eyes that the Board of Aldermen, by unanimous vote, passed the fireworks ordinance shortly after last year's July 4 celebration. The measure forbids not only the sale or display of fireworks in the city, but also their discharge, except at public spectacles supervised by an expert and conducted under a city permit.

The ordinance is effective this year for the first time, and the problem of enforcement is of paramount importance. The police will probably not trouble to arrest every boy or girl caught shooting fireworks, but it is not unreasonable to expect a roundup of adult offenders. There will be an abundant supply of fireworks available, since the Legislature failed to pass a State law similar to the ordinance, and stands of fireworks vendors have sprung up outside the city limits. What the police can do, however, is to head off any sales within the city, and the first arrest for this purpose was made Friday, that of a confectioner at whose store fireworks were found on display.

Since fireworks are so easily obtainable, it is up to parents to co-operate with the intent of the ordinance. The police, by closing down on all fireworks sellers, can do much to reduce the annual holiday aftermath of injury and suffering.

LONDE AT LARGE AGAIN.

SUPPOSE an ordinary citizen of small means, generally thought of as decent and law-abiding, should be accused of a crime. Suppose he should be held in jail with his bail bond set at $75,000. Would he find it easy to win his freedom pending trial? Would professional bondsmen get together and put up enough surety to obtain his release?

The answer is obvious. The overwhelming odds are that this average citizen, confronted by so high a bond, would eat jail fare at least until the completion of his trial. Freedom on bail would be a privilege he could not enjoy.

Now consider the case of Isadore Londe. Last January, Londe was convicted of felonious bombing in St. Louis. Bond for the old Egan gangster-ex-convict was set at $40,000. After a while, one of the bondsmen became worried. He asked to be released of his share of $16,000 of the risk. The bond was set aside and the new one fixed at $50,000. Three bondsmen put up the surety and Londe was released, pending appeal on his conviction.

Six months pass. Londe is arrested again. This time it is in connection with a bombing at Cuba, Mo. Crawford County authorities set bail at $25,000. Four St. Louis bondsmen try to get him out, but not until two more join in is he released.

Out on bond of $50,000. Arrested again and required to give another bond of $25,000. In short, now out on two bonds, in two separate cases, totaling $75,000. That is the 1939 bond record of Isadore Londe, habitual criminal. What do the people of Missouri think about it? The Post-Dispatch thinks it a scandalous condition which cries out to high heaven for correction!

EYES ON DANZIG.

Just as last summer, Hitler again has his eye on a new realm of conquest. Danzig takes the place of Czechoslovakia as the tension point, and Nazi methods are much like those of 12 months ago.

Again a great mobilization is launched to impress the intended victim and its friends, with the Nazi explanation that all this is merely the annual summer maneuvers. Again reports of armed men filtering into the desired territory are heard, and are flatly denied by Berlin. Again there are ferocious speeches about the Reich's just claims, its overwhelming power and its determination to fight. And from across the border come the same defiant announcements that not an inch of territory will be yielded.

It is only when eye and ear are turned toward Britain that a change is perceptible. There were warnings to Germany last summer, too, but they came chiefly from unofficial spokesmen such as Winston Churchill or, if from Downing Street, were qualified and mild. Now, however, even Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax are heard making such statements as "We are resolved to use at once the whole of our strength in fulfillment of our pledges."

Will Hitler heed? Assuredly, he is proceeding cautiously. The date for the Danzig coup was allegedly set for early spring; nothing has happened. Much as the Nazis scoff at Britain's new treaty system, it is plain that they respect it sufficiently to refrain from hasty action.

The question remains as to how far Britain will follow its official words with action. Moscow apparently does not trust the British assertions; it is insisting upon a comprehensive and ironclad agreement before entering the anti-aggression bloc. The long negotiations assuredly encourage Nazi hopes, for they betoken a mutual distrust that Berlin may decide, will not survive a baptism of fire.

Nor is the political and strategic position of Danzig itself ideally suited to creation of a clear-cut issue. Should the Danzig Senate vote to join the Free City to Germany, then Poland will have to take the initiative, by armed intervention, to prevent the step. The Nazis will then have a chance to denounce Polish aggression, and Poland's new allies will have a loophole, if they want to use it. No such ambiguities would have arisen had the friends of Czechoslovakia decided to honor their pledges.

Despite the less clear case for a defense of Danzig, it is altogether possible that the lesson of Munich and its sequels has at last sunk in among the British and French leaders. If it has, they are merely learning something that their respective peoples learned long ago. If they can now make their determination register at Berchtesgaden, the dreaded catastrophe may again be averted. Hitler prefers his victories bloodless. He has always backed away when confronted by a solid front; he has moved only when resistance has been broken down in advance.

REMINDER.

When national WPA authorities return to their offices in Washington after the Fourth of July, a notable piece of unfinished business—notable so far as Missouri is concerned—will confront them. This is the matter of Matthew S. Murray, State WPA administrator at Jefferson City by the grace of Tom Pendergast of Leavenworth. Some violations of law are charged up as separate offenses each day they continue. Each day that passes with the discredited Murray at the head of the WPA in Missouri is indictment of the administration. Get him out!

A CURSE FROM THE TOMB.

For persons who speak in awed tones of the "curse" to fall on anyone opening the graves of the ancients in Egypt, there comes a story from the heart of the land of the Pharaohs. It should be of great interest to the superstitious who have pointed to the dozen deaths among the 40-odd members of the Lord Carnarvon expedition since that group dug into King Tutankhamen's tomb in 1923. These deaths, although they resulted from ordinary disease, unusual hazards and even the infirmities of age, helped to maintain the weird theory of the vengeful "hand of the dead."

And now, in the province of Beheira, not far from the tomb of King Tut, an entire village has been visited by a "curse." For ages the people of this village had lived quietly near a huge burial mound. Recently, they began to dig into the tombs of the unknown ancients which honeycombed the mound. Myriads of termites poured out. According to the dispatch, "The insects carried the war into the homes, destroying woodwork, clothes, leatherwork and finally all food." Government entomologists decided that the only thing to do was to build a new village out of range of the termites.

There can be no doubt but that a curse has fallen on these unfortunate villagers. It is a curse of angry termites and that is a lot worse than the "curse" of any Pharaoh. In fact, it is almost as bad as knocking down a wasps' nest in this country.

TWO COLLEGE PRESIDENTS.

THE case of Dr. James M. Smith, lately president of Louisiana State University, presents an interesting contrast with that of President Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California.

Dr. Smith received $18,000 a year—20 times the income of the average family in his State. Yet his cupidity was such that he stole hundreds of thousands of dollars in an effort to augment his salary by playing the market.

Dr. Sproul receives $13,500 a year; yet a few months ago he rejected the presidency of a bank at $50,000 a year. He stated that his salary was ample for his needs and that he preferred to continue his work as a mentor for the youth of his State.

Avariciousness is a sorry trait, wherever found, but a college president, particularly, might be expected to be immune. He should set a spiritual pattern for his institution. If a university, instead of teaching its students to become broad-gauged and unselfish members of society, merely trains them to gather to themselves a greater fraction of the social income, it fails utterly in the prime purpose of education.

That Kansas City machine turned the water into gravy.

HEAVE HO!

The Case of the Administrative Agency

Tribunals like SEC and ICC meet modern needs in Government to which Federal courts are not equal, Solicitor-General says; two systems viewed as complementary, not antagonistic; record of administrative bodies in Supreme Court indicates quality of their work.

From an Address by Robert H. Jackson Before the Wisconsin Bar Association.

MOST lawyers like court procedure, which moves according to a prescribed legal ritual. Administrative bodies, on the other hand, generally sit informally. Their procedure is not rigid, and many of them admit laymen to practice. The court receives evidence only according to technical rules. None but the lawyers understand these rules, and they are generally in disagreement about their application, which makes a trial something of a drama of objections and exceptions.

The administrative tribunal is non-technical about the receipt of evidence, and its procedure is flexible, and even mistakes are easily amended. A layman may actually understand what one of these administrative tribunals is doing and may even appreciate its own grievance.

When the cause reaches decision, the court will generally yield its present opinion to follow precedents laid down earlier in more or less like cases. The administrative tribunal is relatively free from the restraints of this rule. It is often penetrating into new fields. Its concern is with the future more than with the past, and it counts the probable progeny of its decisions as of more importance than their ancestry.

The controversy over the administrative tribunal was old before the New Deal. Constitutionalists of the tribunal and its method, and of legislative finality of its findings of fact, were all settled in decisions rendered before the New Deal. The whole controversy on both sides was summed up by the Supreme Court in Crowell vs. Benson, more than a year before the New Deal took office, and the finality of the administrative orders during the 10 terms, the decisions of the lower Federal courts were affirmed in 139 cases or 54 per cent and reversed in 117 cases or 46 per cent. The administrative tribunals in these cases, however, have a somewhat better record. The Supreme Court affirmed them in 166 cases or 64 per cent and reversed them in only 93 cases or 35 per cent.

The bare record of affirmation and reversal will present, of course, a greatly oversimplified picture, but it is the best test of the quality of administrative decisions that I know of.

The significance of the whole study is that the record of the administrative tribunal before the Supreme Court in review of actual cases gives no support for intemperate attacks upon administrative agencies as generally, or often, usurping, partisan, arbitrary, ignorant or of doubtful integrity. Society needs both the judicial process and the administrative process. As Mr. Justice Stone warned in his majority opinion in the much-litigated Morgan case, neither should "regard the other as an alien intruder." Each has regrettable deficiencies at times in personnel, and rather than arraying them one against the other, our bar associations would be better occupied in cleaning out incompetence and promoting men of ability and understanding and goodwill in both administrative positions and the judiciary.

A Briton's Peace Plan

Books in the News

TENSION between Great Britain and Germany is increasing every day. As a basis for a general settlement with the Nazis, this program is suggested by Sir Arthur Salter, noted British economist and member of Parliament, in his new book "Security: Can We Retrieve It?" (Reynal & Hitchcock, Inc., New York).

Formal cancellation of the clause in the Versailles Treaty holding Germany responsible for the World War, and a world conference to reach a settlement which would replace the whole treaty, with Germany negotiating on an equal footing.

Recognition of Germany's superior trade position in Southeast Europe.
 An offer to all countries of equal entry into British colonial markets; a barter plan with Germany to give her greater access to the raw materials of British colonies; an international authority over all colonial administration.

Reduction and limitation of armaments; equality of strength for countries of comparable status and resources; negotiations for elimination of bombing planes; international control of Gibraltar.

Sir Arthur does not consider this an appeasement program. He speaks disdainfully of appeasement as "a mere euphemism for surrender under menace."

The writer's suggestions on how to deal with the problem of colonies seem vague. In one breath, he asserts that colonies are a world problem and the British should abandon their colonial privileges if other great countries are willing to share the burden of defending the natives from exploitation. In the next breath, he says that "the strategic advantages of the colonies cannot be converted to use against us."

Although denying any British intention of encircling Germany, Sir Arthur says: "We have political traditions and outlook which will make them valuable elements in the new system we are constructing and when strategic conditions permit it—try to associate such countries with us."

He criticizes Lord Baldwin, former Prime Minister, for "shutting his eyes to the evidence" and procrastinating when Nazi rearmament reached dimensions which called for a response. He also berates Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain for "a range of vision both restricted and materialistic."

Let there be any question regarding British virility, he closes his peace program by saying: "The British people are pacific and have sometimes created the illusion that they will yield indefinitely to a strong menace. The four years that succeeded 1914 showed how fallacious was any such belief. If the test should be repeated, the same stiffening of national will to meet a challenge, the same determination to carry through to the end would be found."

WILL she sag or hog? Will her rig sag apart? Will she behave in a seaway? Is she doomed by dry rot or electrolysis? Will she ghost in a calm? Will she lug sail? All this and a lot more is essential knowledge for the prospective buyer of a boat. Here old A. Calahan the salty author of several fine books on sailing small boats, has all the answers in "So You're Going to Buy a Boat" (Macmillan Co., New York). WASHINGTON, July 2.—The convening of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, with its array of Republicans, still just the defeat of New Deal.

On the November election predicted that they would their independence of W dictatorship and give the recovery and economy b legislative program.

"The record," to use a phrase of the late Senator Alfred E. Smith, has almost completely contradicted the boasts of six months employment is about as was in January, after allowance for seasonal and governmental economic factors. The relief bills made their mark, subsidies, silver gratuity payments.

Partisan and personal played during the six months left everyone the loser. Roosevelt, ably assisted by his representatives, had sent no controversial measures, and he has blocked action of several proposals, such as amended the National Labor Relations Act. Although he suffered temporary setbacks in relief legislation, he won virtually the he asked for, both for agency appropriation for year just ended and for Monetary Bill.

The Senate filibuster of the National Labor Relations Act demonstrated the weakness of the Roosevelt leadership at the ends of the capital.

On the neutrality bill, Mr. Leander B. Rayburn and Whip Boland were able to secure a sufficient number of votes on the floor at all times to strictly disciplined Republican opponents and a badly mangled bill by a bare two-vote margin.

The Republicans, led by Representative Hamilton York, deliberately played on the unpopularity of the active Sol Bloom of New York, chairman of the Federal Reserve Committee, whose attack on the administration it was the lowest sort of yet it had the open and support of some Democratic knucklers in the press.

Mr. Coughlin's radio attack on the administration was the Democratic Senate were responsible for the feat of the administration bill, which included a subsidy. Whether this merely temporary will be on continuation of the powers. Even then, should administration win the Court may be called on whether lapsed legislative extended.

Inept Congressional Leadership. Congress certainly was winning when the fiscal year ended. Inept leadership of both the Senate and House rendered a legislative body come when the legislative plans of their own and a merely temporary will be on continuation of the powers. Even then, should administration win the Court may be called on whether lapsed legislative extended.

When Democrats forced the House on the fantastically large public members' bill, almost a third of the bill was struck down. Likewise, a large majority of the House voted to increase the Federal Reserve's power to issue $1,000,000 more than the banks. In the Senate, a Republican made an oblique reference to a silver and silver price of 77 cents a ounce, which was hoped was a disguised reference to the administration's monetary policy.

Vandenberg and the Two Republican candidates for the presidential nomination of Michigan in Ohio, were the leaders in the 77-cent silver vote. Vandenberg's efforts to place every in the silver-product round up convention deal these states for the nomination, and may all the actual election, but the nominee the vote this make "sound" money any my" planks in the 1940

European Developments and Study Events in Washington

Average Down 2.09 Points for Week Though Market at No Time Shows Heavy Liquidating Pressure.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP)—After a brisk climb from the spring lows, business slowed down at the half-year mark this week to survey the threat of another European war crisis and a confused legislative situation in Washington.

Wall Street speculators took in sail as the political weather thickened over Poland. Hard-talking European statesmen, backed by heavy armaments, made security markets shiver. Stock and bond prices were lowered in nervous trading.

Little short covering and timid investment buying today enabled the market to finish a shade on the upside for the day.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 4 of a point at 45.5. For the week, however, this composite suffered its worst reaction since the period of April 8, showing a net loss of 1.9 points. The Dow-Jones average of 65 stocks at 43.91 was .31 of a point higher for the day, but 2.09 points lower for the week. Transfers for the two hours amounted to 185,400 shares against 187,820 last Saturday. Although the volume picked up somewhat on the week (3,126,290 shares against 2,411,710), the turnover for June was the smallest in 18 years.

Fears of a German coup at Danzig over the week end lessened perceptibly as a market handicap and the latest congressional money development—the Senate last night permitted the President's dollar devaluation authority and the stabilization fund to expire—failed to unsettle sentiment, today.

The list started off with minor gains in the majority, loathed narrowly until the final half-hour, then moved up sedately under the leadership of a smattering of "blue chips." At the close advances ran to a point or more for favorites, although there was a sprinkling of minor signs in evidence.

Wall Street refused to get excited over the Washington news, it being realized that when Congress convenes next Wednesday the chief executive's currency powers and the stabilization fund would be revived for possible passage.

At any rate, foreign exchange quotations both in the United States and Europe today were quoted only nominally as New York banks started summer Saturday closings and European financial centers, as usual, were shut down for the week end.

Some traders elected to trim down commitments owing to the belief that attention would be given markets Monday because the exchange will be in recess Tuesday for the celebration of Independence Day. Attendance in boardrooms today was sparse.

Among the day's forward leaning shares were Western Electric, du Pont, General Electric, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Rubber, Great Northern, Standard Oil of N. J., U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Kennecott, American Telephone and Consolidated Edison.

Gathering Storm Clouds. The gathering storm over Danzig, brokers suggested, probably explained why Wall Street and London the last two months have been reluctant to bid up security prices in proportion to the rise in business barometers. When Premier Daladier of France said Europe faced its worst crisis in 20 years, he appeared to voice what has been weighing on the minds of many in world financial centers.

The battle between the administration and the Senate over extension of President Roosevelt's monetary powers, and the move to divert the monetary atmosphere in Europe, although it was cited as an added reason for caution in the market place.

The steel and automobile industries, leaders of the May-June business rebound in the United States, curtailed production schedules, partly in preparation for the usual vacation letdown over Fourth of July. The Associated Press index of industrial activity was unchanged at 88.6 after recovering in six weeks all the April and early May losses.

In view of the gloomy utterances from high European quarters, Wall Street was inclined to assume the spring breathing spell was drawing to a close. Vivid in the recollections of the financial district was the last summer's crisis worked up to the climax of Munich, followed by Hitler's mid-March coup in Czechoslovakia.

Big Copper Order. An echo of the European headlines, commodity followers reported, was a huge wave of foreign buying in copper. Nearly 24,000 tons, said to be a record for a single day, were taken for foreign account yesterday at an average price of 40.30 cents a pound.

Emphasizing the war note in the business news were United States defense orders for $25,000,000 of military equipment, going at high speed, was estimated to have a record-breaking total of about $260,000,000 in unfilled orders, with prospect of more to come from the United States Army Navy.

Allowing for seasonal fluctuations, electric power, rail carloadings and cotton manufacturing were higher in the week's industrial barometers. But steel, motor vehicles and shipbuilding were lower.

The Associated Press index, with components based on latest figures, was 88.6 at the close of the week.

COMMODITY INDEX IS OFF FOR FIFTH WEEK

Recessions Are Mostly Small and Center in Farm Staples.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP)—A slow decline in commodity prices, centering in farm staples, carried the Associated Press index of 35 basic products down this week for the fifth consecutive loss.

Recessions for the most part were small and in farm staples, there were signs of renewed buying on a larger scale, as in world sugar futures and in the export copper market near the week end.

Outstanding was a scramble to accumulate copper for foreign account. Trade reports said nearly 24,000 tons of copper were bought yesterday for export channels, presumably destined in large part to supply material for the great armament programs of the chief industrial nations.

New War Scare. A new war scare, rising out of the Danzig question and foreboding of a severe summer crisis in Europe, was Premier Daladier of France and other European dignitaries, was watched in commodity circles with varied emotions.

Grains at times were inclined to be a little under the market, but there was a strong tendency to move to stick close to shore until the outlook clears.

The Associated Press 35-commodity index receded to 65.90 from 66.30 the preceding week but was only a little under the 1929 level, 66.39 a year ago. Meanwhile, the big staples of world trade have been moving in a narrow range.

Replenishment of inventories, it appeared, provided a prop for certain wholesale markets, notably cotton textiles. Prices in these lines, which generally were considered below production cost, have moved up recently against the trend in farm products and metals.

Abundant rains in many places improved the crop outlook and thereby helped to stabilize prices, plus position in the forefront of market attention. A rally in hogs was an important exception to the week's main line of movement.

What Index Shows. The Associated Press index, based on 1926 average prices as 100, and its component groups compared as follows:

New Financing. Steel market operators a little better "Iron Age" said the industry expected to operate in the second half of the year at somewhat higher levels than in the first half. Auto-automobile output, according to trade estimates, dropped to 70,663 units from 81,070 while the industry was still far above the comparable 1934 level of 58,000 units.

New investment for industrial expansion remained at low ebb but Wall Street's underwriters had one of their best runs of corporate financing in many months. Debt refinancing to obtain lower interest charges largely accounted for the week's offerings, totaling nearly $124,000,000.

WEBSTER SEA SCOUTS WIN OKOBOJI REGATTA

Thompson Trophy Awarded to Boat Backed by Lions' Club.

The SSS Sea Lion, sponsored by the Webster Groves Lions' Club, received the Thompson trophy for winning the regional sea scout regatta at Lake Okoboji, Milford, Ia. Thirty-two scout ships from 11 cities, with about 300 members, took part in the races June 19 to 21.

There were 71 officers and scouts on seven St. Louis ships. The SSS Pelican of St. Michael's and St. George's Church took second in the K class and the SSS Pelican of West Presbyterian Church was fourth in double rowing. The SSS Golden Eagle published the "Windbag," daily newspaper of the camp.

Twelve members of Troop 57, Wyman School, will leave Saturday on a roving trip to Northern Wisconsin. They will camp at Starved Rock State Park in Illinois Saturday night and will arrive at Lake Carroll, near Woodruff, Wis., next Sunday afternoon. The boys will sleep in pup tents and cook their meals during the eight-and-a-half-day trip.

Four hundred pies and about 3000 doughnuts were served during the first section at Camp Irondale. A sample daily food list included six bushels of tomatoes, 35 pounds of butter, 75 gallons of milk, 350 pounds of meat, 100 loaves of bread, two bushels of green beans and 70 pies.

Troops 305 and 307 built a 40-foot rustic bridge across a stream at the camp. In bird hikes at Irondale, 87 species were noted. Several minor collecting trips to Iron Mountain are planned.

Fourteen troops with 280 members were at Irondale with the first section. Troops which eat at the Council Mess Hall are now being summoned by a bell, instead of a bugle.

Eight members of Troop 407, sponsored by the Crystal City Lions' Club, have erected a flag pole at the tepee unit. Troop 456, Baptist Church of Festus and Crystal City, is building a rustic campfire site.

Six scouts in Troop 41, Ward Junior High School, took the 14-mile hike to Bismarck and four scouts hiked to the youth hostel at Caledonia.

Thirty-five scouts learned to swim during the first camp section. Six qualified for the swimming merit badge.

MRS. EMMA M. SHARP FUNERAL

Services at Kingsbury Place Residence Tomorrow Morning.
The funeral of Mrs. Emma Manewal Sharp, who died of cancer Friday evening at her home, 34 Kingsbury place, after an illness about half a year, will be at the residence at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery. The Rev. John W. MacIvor will officiate.

Mrs. Sharp, 68 years old, was a native of St. Louis, the daughter of the late August Manewal. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ernest E. Arnold of New York; two sisters, Miss Caroline Manewal and Mrs. Lillian Manewal McDermid, and a brother, Louis Manewal.

YOU NEED RISK, NOT REST

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SO you think you need a rest? "All this high-tension living's bad for a person," you say. "Too much stimulation and excitement. I'm not as young as I used to be; gotta cut it out . . . begin to take things easy."

Yes, indeed! But is it doing you any good? No, it is not! Every day in every way you feel more like a last year's bird's nest! And no wonder.

Whenever I see a person slowing down, playing safe, as you're doing, I'm reminded of Old Tom. Old Tom was Dad's horse, a drearier nag you never met, generally speaking. I can see him yet—shuffling along in his rickety buckboard . . . spine sagging . . . hooves dragging. Yes, he certainly was a pitiful sight as he tottered through the daily round. Scolding, pleadings were of no avail. The old boy had taken the count—and definitely. At least, that's what you thought!

BUT JUST LET any horse try to pass him on the road and that ancient equine would give you the surprise of your life! Up went his head—out went his legs—into his eyes flashed fire! Eat another nag's dust? Not he! He burned up the road! And all because—?

All because he'd felt the sting of competition! So long as there was no challenge to face—no risk to take—Old Tom was heading for "the Last Round-Up" . . . and I don't mean maybe! But let his interest be aroused, his pride irked and Old Tom saw red! Gone was the boredom of the daily grind . . . forgotten the galling pressure of the yoke. Years and weariness slipped away like magic. He was young again . . . hot again . . . rockets had nothing on him!

LOOKING FOLKS over nowadays . . . listening to their bleats 'n' groans . . . I'm increasingly convinced that most of us are Old Toms. Time was when things were so tough they kept us hustling, willy nilly. But for the last 30 years the Machine Age has been ironing out all the bumps . . . surrounding us with Comfort and Convenience . . . making things Safe and Soft. In addition, we are constantly warned of perils that Grampa never knew existed.

"Look out for your blood pressure . . . take care of those hardened arteries . . . beware of Fatigue poisoning! These are dangerous days. Too much speed and pressure . . . burn out the old batteries! Be careful! Take it easy! Go slow! Etc. . . etc. . . etc."

As a consequence, most of us have acquired a safety first philosophy. We just jog along through life, steering clear of all the chuck holes. Then we wonder why we're bored . . . why we haven't any interest in things . . . 'n' nothing seems to matter. Maybe we need a rest.

A REST? Phooey! We're a bunch of Old Toms! What we need is a risk . . . not a rest! Competition . . . not comfort! Something that'll yank us out of our safe, snug rut . . . boost us up on our toes . . . make us hustle to defend our record!

Bored? Fed up with life? Then tackle something tough . . . something that'll arouse your curiosity and challenge your pride! Court conflict and competition! Pick yourself some new ideas that'll upset your old prejudices. Get acquainted with some strange people who live in different, exciting ways. Find a new interest—something that'll knock the moss off your ears. And you'll find yourself burning up the road!

FOR NON-SMOKERS

By Emily Post

DEAR MRS. POST: I am a young married woman, and neither my husband nor I smoke. Most of my friends do. When I invite them to my house, am I supposed to provide cigarettes for them or is it all right to take for granted that they will smoke their own cigarettes since they all carry them.

ANSWER: If you are giving a party you should certainly include cigarettes in your provisions. But if people merely stop in to see you it is not necessary to proffer cigarettes, since, as you say, all smokers carry their own. Moreover, they usually refuse those of non-smokers because they are all too likely to find them stale. To keep a few unopened packages is, of course, the best plan.

DEAR MRS. POST: Is there anything improper about the term "boy friend"? Mother thinks that it sounds cheap, but to me escort doesn't describe the man I like best half as well as "boy friend." Or does it?

ANSWER: It doesn't! But why, is hard to explain, since nothing is more unreasonably arbitrary, than the social acceptances or tabus of speech. For not-to-be-explained reasons, the term "boy friend" has been made welcome everywhere, whereas the word "escort" is still out on the front stoop without any apparent chance of being let in!

DEAR MRS. POST: We have been having a discussion about the propriety of a young woman wearing slacks on (a) train and (b) on the street of a resort town. The group is divided in its opinion and we have to call upon you to settle the question. Will you tell us what you think?

ANSWER: My opinion is that (a) slacks are very unsuitable on a regular city to city train. On the other hand, on a local train running from one resort town to another, on a beach, for example, to another further along the coast, or on a regular sports train that carries canoes upstream or skiers up the mountain, they are obviously right. (b) Yes. According to present fashion they are suitable on the really—or apparently—young, and unquestionably slim, in any place that is definitely a resort.

CARRYING ON IN A LARGE WAY

Kate Smith Reaches New Heights of Popularity on Wave of Patriotism Sweeping Country

By Alvin H. Goldstein

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 1.

"God bless America, Land that I love—"

THE entertainment world has gone patriotic, as most of us know by this time, and in the very forefront, leading the way, is the commanding figure Kate Smith, who this week starts her summer vacation from radio with the knowledge that sincere flag waving, in her case at least, pays big dividends.

Kate received first aid from Irving Berlin, the song writer, in her patriotic drive. Sensing the new trend as early as a year ago, she asked Berlin to turn out a patriotic song for her, and the result was the now familiar "God Bless America," which she sang for the first time on Armistice day of 1938. They're now teaching it in many public schools of the land, and it is tied up with Kate Smith almost as tightly as "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

Partly on the strength of the popularity of the song as she sings it, and partly too, on her recognized talent, Kate Smith signed a new three-year non-cancellable contract two months ago at a salary of at least $7000 a week. The contract may be suspended only in the event of war.

So, when Kathryn Elizabeth Smith—that's her full name—returned to her home town of Washington last month to sing in the White House at President Roosevelt's musicale for the King and Queen of England, she returned as a home-town girl who had made good in a very large way, with an estimated million dollars salted away and more, much more, where that came from.

Most radio listeners can remember the time that the moon first went over the mountain, and Kate Smith became a personality. Few know that it was a result of lucky accident. If an executive of the Columbia Phonograph Company hadn't been in the audience one night at a performance of "Flying High," there might have been no "Kated Corporation," distributing charities like royalty she entertained, no great fortune, no prestige, no "command performance" in the White House. For Kate Smith, in the theater, weighing 235 pounds, was not precisely a glamorous girl.

The Columbia executive, Ted Collins, dashed back stage at the end of the performance of the musical comedy and signed Kate Smith to a contract. He perceived that her songs had an appeal, that her voice was a "billy laugh," and he had a hunch that if that other lacked, an immediate friendship was formed which has lasted to this day and finds Collins her manager and announcer and Kate Smith tops in the world of entertainment, able to command her price in radio, on stage or in motion pictures. But Kathryn's feet, below surprisingly trim ankles, are on the ground.

At Thursday's rehearsal, Miss Smith chatted informally with this interviewer while others in her company reviewed the night's broadcast. She was dressed in a silk print, hurriedly substituted for a white Hoover apron because so many photographers and friends turned up at the rehearsal. It was just as comfortable, she pointed out, and far more presentable. Her light brown hair was up and back. Her voice was strident and emphatic in conversation.

Her greatest personal triumph, in her own opinion, was her appearance before the President, the First Lady and King George and Queen Elizabeth. Next, without hesitation, she names the occasion on which she received the Legion of Valor medal, the first private citizen to be so honored. The award carried with it reception of the Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross and the Navy Cross, obviously rendering the ordinary civilian ineligible. She found her third choice difficult to make, ultimately deciding on the party in 1935 in Madison Square Garden sponsored by her radio employers, when more than 22,000 persons attended, to render her a personal tribute. Even when she listed that occasion in third place, her eyes moistened as she recounted the event.

IN making her selections, she had to consider such honors as the following: She was selected as one of the 10 outstanding women in America in 1938 by American women. She was voted the top popular songstress by 400 radio editors and columnists in an impartial canvass by Motion Picture Daily, a trade magazine; she was named and chosen by the radio division of the New York Fund, an organization similar to the St. Louis Community Fund; she was placed at the top of a poll conducted on popularity of radio personalities by Radio

KATE SMITH . . . SHE'S VERY DEFINITE IN THE STATEMENT THAT HER PATRIOTISM IS NO POSE.

Guide; she has received an "appreciation cup" from the president of RKO; she was the first star sponsored by any radio broadcasting chain, and she is an honorary member of the American Red Cross. Kate's appreciation of comedy has come to mean more than just the success of her own radio program. She has introduced a great many newcomers to radio listeners and theatergoers. Because of her ability in arranging programs, she was placed on the toughest spot in the radio world, the hour featuring Rudy Vallee on another network. No one "in the know" denies the result, regardless of where their interests lie—one of them has got to move, the radio hour isn't big enough for both of them. Kate Smith has tied, if not beaten, Rudy Vallee at his own game.

HER instinct for proper performance has become legendary. Of course, she now strictly follows script at radio performances after a number of rehearsals. But in personal appearances she has that certain something enabling her to know the taste of an audience the minute she appears before it. One night she demonstrated this knack when she appeared before the National Association of Broadcasters, what is known in the show business as a "billy laugh."

That's the way Sophie is. When she wants something for somebody she usually gets it. Crawford's chief trouble when he left Broadway for Hollywood was to keep from being type in Lennie roles all the time. After quite a tussle, he thinks he's finally succeeded. "But, you have to take some far measures to convince them that you can play a variety of roles," he said.

The Goldwyn picture I play is a big, tough army lieutenant and on the face of it the role was very much in the same mood as Lennie. In order to soften the part they had me go around picking and smelling orchids all the time. I could never resist an orchid. Well, that was all right until some of my pals saw it and now I will confess I have been taking a lot of what I think is very unfunny ribbing by their yelling "Flower Boy" when they see me.

Crawford has one exacting mentor in helping him get started on his acting career. That is his mother, comedienne Helen Broderick.

BACK ON BROADWAY

By George Tucker

NEW YORK, July 1. and in one stand we all went out for dinner together. "I was crazy about these little oyster crackers then, much preferring them to candy. When I asked for some Sophie called the waiter back."

"Walter," she said, "Bring the little boy some oyster crackers." "I can't serve crackers without oysters," the waiter answered. "There are seven of us here, Sophie ordered. 'Bring seven orders of oysters with oyster crackers.'"

"When the waiter served the seven orders, Sophie said, 'Now take the oysters away and leave the crackers.'"

FOR still another reason, I am not unfamiliar with the White House, she said. "My grandfather, an interior decorator, restored the White House every four years, or rather each time a new president was elected. For those who criticize my patriotism, I would like to present my creed. I believe in the Constitution of the United States. I believe in our democratic form of government. I believe that all those who think there is any other form of government which is better than ours should go or be sent to that country as quickly as possible to live for the rest of their lives."

At the conclusion of the interview she hastened to rejoin her company already on the stage, where they would perform publicly a few hours later. Then, and then only, did she revert to type. "Thanks for listening," she said in the honeyed voice that has made her famous. A few seconds later she was singing into a "dead" microphone: "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

100 Women, No Battles

By Harold Heffernan

HOLLYWOOD, July 1. RACING toward the finish tape this week after nearly three months before the cameras is "The Women," a picture that so far has completely baffled all the grandstand gossip.

No one would have bet a nickel that an all-feminine cast of 100, headed by such career-conscious folks as Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell and Paulette Goddard could share scene after scene over such a long period of shooting time without getting involved in a few vocal or physical slugging matches.

But, to all outward appearances at least, the girls have fooled the sideline vultures. About the only temperament displayed has been that demanded by the script. And, with only a few days to go, even money is offered that the principal ladies will emerge from the stage on speaking terms.

FULL CREDIT for keeping the peace among these fiery charges is accorded George Cukor, the screen's outstanding "woman's director." Cukor soothes and pets and pampers—and at the same time manages to extract first-class performances from high-strung puppets.

The morning we dropped in to watch the cameras work, Norma Shearer was entertaining her club of Renolites and, with dinner over, a small group composed of Miss Shearer, Phyllis Povah, Paulette Goddard and Joan Fontaine, had gathered in her modernistic boudoir to renew their lipstick before dashing out to a night club.

The girls were in a huddle, looking over each others' heads and each others' arms into one small mirror. The only missing member of the clan was the much-married Countess de Lage, played by Mary Boland.

"Where's Flora?" Miss Povah inquired. "Duck at the bar, drinking with the men," answers Paulette. "Go down, Peggy, and tell her to hurry," instructs Norma, turning to Joan.

"Aw, leave her alone," draws ex-churchgoer Goddard. Let her have a couple more drinks and she'll come floating up here on her own breath."

As she utters the last line, Paulette looks away from the mirror, still daubing the lipstick as she talks.

ALL THIS was in rehearsal and Director Cukor beamed as he watched. "That's very good," he said. "Now, we'll shoot it, girls. Remember the tempo—snap into it. Make those lines sparkle the way the writer intended they should."

In a few moments the real action was on, with lights up and camera rolling along its dolly. Paulette gets off her final crack, turning from the camera and jostling the arm of Miss Povah as she does so.

The chubby little Cukor was so pleased he almost went into a dance. "We couldn't possibly get a shot any better than that," he complimented the women. They all beamed back at him. They loved his words.

AND JUST THEN came a sonorous grunt from the man aboard the camera dolly.

"Wait a minute," he called coldly, "we'll have to do that scene over again. What in the world happened to Miss Goddard's tooth?"

Paulette ran to the mirror, parted her lips and looked in. One front molar was almost hidden by rouge.

When she jostled Miss Povah's arm, her own lipstick had slipped and run partially over uncharted territory—and, through the camera's eye, with red registering as black, Paulette suddenly had become toothless.

The women laughed, looked disconsolately at Cukor. But the director cheered them up at once. "We'll shoot it this time with blank lipsticks," he decreed sagely. And the prop man scurried at once to get half a dozen lipsticks that wouldn't run red—and make pretty women look like toothless hags.

UNIVERSAL was in a dither when Michael Lewis, 9-year-old son of Dorothy and Sinclair Lewis, came out to call. Mike arrived, saw everyone with little interest. Then went to lunch. When they gave him a cake, he promptly blew out the candles before they could get a picture of him. On the third take, he said: "That's enough, boys; wait my lunch."

WHEN JACKIE COOPER takes his Clam Bake Cats to the Paramount Theater in New York this fall, he'll organize his own cheering section from local high schools, placing it in the orchestra pit where he can keep an eye on the boys!

THIS NEW YORK

By Lucius Beebe

WHETHER the opening of "Streets of Paris" at the Broadhurst last Monday is to be regarded as the last first night of the old season or the first premiere of the new one is merely an academic problem along Broadway, but one thing everyone at Sardi's during the entr'acte, agreed on: that it emphatically disproved the thesis that vaudeville was dead. "Hellzapoppin" might have been an isolated and unique manifestation reviving vestigial traces of the old Palace technique, but "Streets of Paris" definitely discredits the rumor of vaudeville's passing. It is, indeed, a sort of definitive, variorum edition of vaudeville lore, including every corny and delightful device, from straw hat smashing and slaps slapping to falling from stage boxes and hurling dead fruit. It is a sort of all-time high in the career of the wonderful Bobby Clark and the first night itself witnessed a turnout of high-toned folk not usually associated in one's mind with fake adagio dancing and old-time bedroom sketches. Jack and Charlie's at dinner, save for the various summer versions of evening dress around the premises, resembled nothing so much as a de luxe mid-season opening night, with Conde Nast and Kay Halle at their accustomed table and the rest of the room studded with George and Beatrice Kaufman and Moss Hart, Eddie Warburg, Steve Hannigan and all the accustomed regulars. If anything, the autograph phase was thicker around the Broadhurst than in winter time and, what with the heat and general laugh qualities of the evening, everyone was so thirsty as to swamp Sardi's under a deluge of cash customers.

Later, both Morocco and the Stork were reported to have been jammed to the guards, and it was apparent all over town that some of the luxury trade which has been spending its evenings and money at the Fair for the last month or so is back in its accustomed Manhattan stamping ground. For a time it looked as though there wasn't going to be any more New York night life at all, what with the French Pavilion's restaurant being reserved for six weeks in advance and all the town whooping and hollering at Billy Rose's incredible Aquacade and in Ballantine's bar, but there seem to be enough spenders at the moment to populate both Gotham proper and the Fair.

IN LOCAL topos and etal circles of late there has been a great deal of gab about "virgin brandies," "nature cognacs" and "London-docks bottlings," and not a few wine merchants around the boulevards have stocked them, usually at pretty fancy prices. "Virgin brandy," when honestly bottled, may mean, in a loose sense, an undistilled mixture of various growths—Grande Fine champagne, Borderie, Fins Bois, Bons Bois, etc.—with the brandy of each growth a product of several vineyard owner-distillers and all of varying age; or, in its most exact sense, virgin cognac may be the undistilled product of a single growth from one vineyard-distiller, of the same age, distillation and, preferably, one cask. As a matter of fact, individual distillations of matured, untouched first-growth cognacs are next to impossible to procure, since most vineyard proprietors cash in on their property through sales to the great cognac bottling firms as soon as their product comes of age.

The Wine and Food guzzlers and the Friends of Escoffier heretofore pounce on any virgin brandy that appears on the local market like kittens after catnip. Far and away the best spirits in this category which this department has discovered are two casks which Fred Wildman procured for Bellows & Co. on his last sniffing safari abroad, one of them a Grande Fins Bois distilled in 1893, and the other a Grande Fins champagne a few years younger, light, fragrant and obviously well bred. The Fins Bois has a fuller body and more robust flavor, and appeals, in general terms, to drinkers who prefer an armagnac to a cognac and like their spirits to have a quality they can sink their teeth into. Although he admits it to be tantamount to sacrilege, Wildman likes to serve the Fins Bois and the cognac mixed half and half.

AT JOHN PERONA'S cocktail party for Martin de Alzaga Unze, known to the town as "Macco," of Buenos Aires; Prince Amar Jit and Prince Jit, of Kapurthala; Brenda Frazier and Lord Donegal, Homer Smith, the Winnie Gardiners, Mae Murray, Peggy Joyce and Conde Nast, Mary Anita Loos, with a hat held on her head by a heavy, solid gold chain like a military helmet; Dorothy Lamour, with Mary Brian; Peter Arno and, across the room from him, Jaro Fabry, whose drawings are so like Peter's; Hal Phyte, who borrowed Dick Sarno's camera and went around taking candid shots for fun; Wally and Valerie Emmanuel Ziegler Harwood, McClelland Barclay, the Georges Metaxas and Tullio Carminati, Dick Brugiere, Lou Nova and Edmund and Toni Anderson—in a word, all the glamour girls and all the glitter boys in a Niagara of John's best Perrier Jout, just like old times!

A correspondent's request for the formula for fishhouse punch, the great Annapolis drink, elicits the following formula from A. K. Mills, the demon publicist: six quarts of rye, one pint of rum, a quart of peach brandy, a cup of lemon juice four cups of sugar and one of strong black tea. This stock should be allowed to stand a week, preferably in the stone crocks of tradition, and then mixed one part of stock to one part of sparkling water or ice tea. There is, too, a school of thought which believes the fill-up should be a vintage champagne. It has been discovered by pioneers that the best way to drink this arrangement is lying in bed, since it saves kind friends the inevitable inconvenience of having to put one there.

AROUND THE TOWN: Night club wise talk has it that Fefe closed Monte Carlo for the summer just as the after-dark trade around town was starting to boom, and that John Perona, by staying open for the summer, is getting most of his old customers back again. . . . That Rumanian piper who thrills guests at the Rumanian Pavilion is Fania Luca—very good. . . . Asked for a definition of the difference between trousers and pants, Fred Meyenberg, president of the Merchant Tailors' Association of New York, says: "When you pay more than $5 for them they become trousers!" . . . The Gilbert Seldess celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary last week in Westchester with an enormous swine, at which Amanda wore her wedding dress, with a mid-20's bouquet, exactly as she had at the original ceremony. . . . Most of the wedding party turned up, too. . . . Grover Whalen is collecting a full-size wardrobe (as if he needed one) out of the World's Fair. . . . The latest addition is a suit woven from the wool of the Firestone Farm sheep.

DICK ALDRICH and other regular pilgrims to Denver's Central City drama festival are preparing for their annual Western junket July 15. . . . This year's show in the Rocky Mountain "ghost town" is to be "The Yeomen of the Guard," with a cast including Natalie Hall and Richard Hale. . . . John Hoyerstadt, sometime of the Rainbow Room, who stood them up in London this season with his impersonations, will be entertainer in the bar of the old Teller House at Central City.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT ## BACK TO COMPLETE COVERAGE?

Evidence That Women Are Becoming Tired of the "Undressed" Fashions of Recent Years Is Piling Up in All Style Centers.

By SYLVIA STILES

A WOMAN toying with a fashion reminds us of a puppy dog playing with a bone. Like Fido, she'll go to any extreme to claim her prize, even to fighting a battle, then tease it unmercifully, tear it apart and gnaw it down to the marrow before tossing it over her shoulder or burying it deep in the ground after which she will chase off in the opposite direction. Some day the chances are she'll return in search of this discarded possession and never rest until she's rescued it from its hiding place.

We've been seeing a little dog-versus-bone episode in the way women have been toying with their "undressed" fashions. It hasn't been so many years—22 or 23 to be fairly exact—since they were battling the Blue Laws and the frowns of the elders to introduce a bare-leg fad. They fought a frantic battle on the beaches and in the swimming pools, from which they emerged with blistered skins, but victorious smiles. From that time to this they've engaged in a "strip-tease" act until they've exhausted most of the possibilities.

After that memorable battle to get black stockings off their legs, they shed the heavy collar collars on their swimming suits and invited more arrests by discarding their skirts as well as exposing their backs. Old Sol proved to be a good recruit at this stage of the skirmish by whispering to the health authorities that sun bathing and Vitamin C must go hand in hand. Beach loungers in a tan-shorts that are daringly brief, with nung mode ventured from the "bra" topped play suits and shirts, beaches to the club verandas and with slashes and cut-outs of fabric to the roofs.

Soon the highways and the byways were introduced to knees and backbones while the hikers, the cyclists, the motorists and the old back-to-nature advocates all lowered their carefree pursuits, reducing clothes to the minimum. Long-faced critics and "nut-tut" artists who once covered their faces at the first glimpse of a Now there isn't much left to go vertebrae have long since ceased to except join a nudist colony unless raise an eyebrow.

At last we've reached the state where no one pays any attention to toes on the street sidewalks. The bathing to gain freedom from clothes that suit has been reduced to two small wisps of fabric, a popular outfit for active sports offers the same type of coverage as a ballet costume, low décolletées are in vogue for afternoon while midrifts, as well as backs and shoulders are exposed to the night air. The sketches shown in the group at the first glimpse of a nudist colony unless raise an eyebrow.

The women have experimented with its sleeves well below the elbow is a midsummer newcomer in St. Louis. Conspicuous among the evening modes and perhaps more sensational than those which leave the waistslines bare are the dresses which have demure basque jackets, frilled at the edges. The sleeves extend well down over the wrists while collars have a choker-like quality. Striped themes in the gypsy mood also are proof of the well-dressed trend.

This back-to-modesty vogue is not confined to St. Louis, long recognized as one of America's conservative cities. It is apparent from coast to coast as well as across the waters. True, the Riviera has seen some bathing suits not much larger than the historical fig leaves, but Schiaparelli, recognized as the most daring designer of the century, has launched a bloomer dress. The bloomers extend far enough below the hemline of the skirt to get into the fashion's limelight and launch a new mode.

Nudity has ceased to be a bone of contention, so they're launching skirts and "long-ish" shorts are beaches' is the modest shroud ing worn by sufficient vacationists to indicate a transformation. For active sports those who have been wearing a minimum of clothes are confronted by their rivals in enveloping capes with its attached hood is pictured on this page. Bathing suits with jackets, extra shirts. Reports from the retail shops show that there has been a greater demand for slacks than during any previous summer while long-sleeved jackets and shirts are going into the smartest vacation wardrobes.

Long-sleeved, high-necked dresses are being heralded as the latest theme for afternoon and informal dinners. They are featured of cotton materials, identified with hot-weather fashions, as well as with silk and synthetics in dark shades. The sheer daytime frock

More outspoken in his opinion was the bright young salesman at one of the department stores who admitted frankly that he would serve the man and little woman combination cheerfully but that he thought woman's place was not in the haberdashery's.

"I think a man ought to be allowed to pick out his own suit," he said, "but I've seen lots of men buy suits they didn't really like just because their wives insisted on it. Even some of our salesmen here have to take a suit home for the wife's approval before buying it."

"Personally," he added complacently, "my wife lets me do my own buying."

"Do you think," we asked him, "if you were handed together with some sort of organization and tried to get men to wear business shirts, or aqua colored slacks and shirt outfits, as Elizabeth Haves advocates, they could do it?"

"If some husbands ever organized," said the salesman in prophetic tones, "they could make men wear anything." And as we walked away we could see him shuddering silently at the thought.

WE RECOMMEND as the card story of the week the following, hard to believe, but relayed to us through a reputable source. A Webster Groves foursome was engaged in their regular Saturday night game when the hostess was called away to the phone in another part of the house. After the call she prepared some drinks, took them in, and the game proceeded only to be interrupted when they noticed 11 cards missing. Positive that the woman had carried them with her, in spite of her recent denials, they carefully retraced her steps in search of the cards, but without success. Finally a new pack was brought out and the game continued.

A short time after the visiting couple had gone home, the phone rang again.

"Maybe they've found the cards," the woman suggested hopefully as she lifted the receiver.

The other couple had found the cards. They had driven home, put their car in the garage, and walked into the house where for the first time they noticed the 11 cards, caught neatly in the cuff of the man's trousers.

Our only fear in relating this story is that some card expert may take to the practice of dropping cards in his trouser cuff for purposes of ill gain. In which case, we decided in a weather-weakened moment, he should be branded as a cuff lynx.

THE CIVIC THEATER is still reverberating slightly from the tense situation caused a short time ago when a well known St. Louis packing house contracted for a full page ad opposite to the cast listing, and submitted as their copy a headline in large type reading, "We Serve Ham Here." The cast, to a man, objected. It was not the proximity of the ad that they minded but they wanted it clearly understood that the ham referred to was a pig product and not an artistic asperser. The dramatic deadlock was cleared up, however, when the packing house agreed to qualify the wording. It now reads, we noticed on our program the other night, "We serve ham—at the refreshment stand."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Clarissa Start

WE admire the modern and sensible attitude of the young mother we heard of recently. Shopping at one of the suburban markets, she left her small son, Billy by name, peacefully parked in his baby buggy in front of the store. Another mother came along and parked her child and his carriage alongside. The second, something of an infant terrible, fully illustrated his personal good neighbor policy by leaning over and biting Billy. Aroused by his yowls, Billy's mother rushed out, but rather than becoming irate about having her offspring chased by a strange child, she merely commented philosophically, "It was a good experience for Billy. It gave him his first lesson in 'man's inhumanity to man.'"

WOMEN who complain that their revolutionary role in history has waned are not taking advantage of their opportunities, or so we gather in a series of chats with several suit salesmen we unearthed from behind the tropical wardrobes in department stores and men's shops last week.

"Do you realize that more than 40 per cent of our customers bring their wives along to help them buy a suit?" the owner of one store asked us. "And the wives' influence is tremendous. Of course," he amended hastily, "we suspect for our benefit, 'we don't mind their coming along; in fact we'd rather sell to a couple because then the man doesn't have to bring his suit back. And we do try to please both of them, but," and his voice sank to a whisper as he leaned closer, "confidentially we try to please the wife most."

More outspoken in his opinion was the bright young salesman at one of the department stores who admitted frankly that he would serve the man and little woman combination cheerfully but that he thought woman's place was not in the haberdashery's.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

DEAR MRS. CARR: I HAVE read many comments in your column recently regarding divorced men marrying. I am one of these and have been for 14 years and, to me, the breaking up of my marriage, which I held to be sacred and secure, is still a very vivid nightmare. I know that I'll never forget. But, just why there is so much objection to a divorced person remarrying, I fail to understand.

It seems to me that when two persons stand before the earthly representative of Almighty God and make their most sacred vows, they should be kept in all honor and decency; but when one or the other does not live up to this, I believe this automatically releases the innocent party. I want to add that I have the deepest contempt for one who violates the fidelity he owes to his partner in marriage and he should be isolated socially. The blameless one should be helped, not hurt.

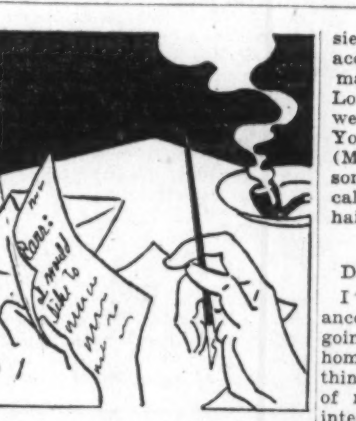

My own experience was too much of a shock for me ever to recover and I know I will remain single the balance of my life (though to some this may sound like a weak sister). I take it, however, that any man who can stand up to heavy work in a steel foundry cannot be called a "Sissy."

ANOTHER DIVORCED MAN.

DEAR MRS. CARR: MY FATHER, who was a superintendent of schools in Illinois for years, collected a large number of books which I should like to give some worthy person who would make good use of them. One group of the books, for instance, would interest a high school teacher. They deal with methods of teaching English, history, science and arithmetic, and there are several on measuring the intelligence of the pupil. The other group of books (20) would serve a high school student and contains much information on history, civics, science and economics. I would like to place these at once.

BOOK LOVER.

DEAR MRS. CARR: JUST WHAT, in your opinion, is a "Hoosier"? I consulted Webster's dictionary and it simply says: "A citizen of the State of Indiana." Surely that definition is not adequate, since I am from Missouri, and I was recently called a "Hoosier" in such a particularly venomous way that I am moved to discover just what species of reptile I am supposed to represent. True, I am from a small town, but we are eccentric in any respect, but maybe I'm just prejudiced. I would appreciate your opinion in this matter and so would several other girls who have come here to make their living.

THREE HOOSIERS (Or Are We?)

The information given me about this by a real "Hoosier" is: "I happen to be a native of Indiana and would like to give the credit of the word 'Hoosier' to the early settlers who arrived along the Ohio River, the place was more or less wild and the custom was to ask, at the door who was there, before opening it. They inquired, 'Who's here?' and this gradually merged into 'Hoosier'."

The word "Hoosier" in recent years has to a certain extent taken the place of that other American word, "hick," which one dictionary defines as "a person distinguished by country-town manners, speech or dress." However, I wouldn't worry too much about being called a "Hoosier."

DEAR MRS. CARR: I AM 15 AND HAVE an allowance, beautiful clothes, and am going to college. I have a nice home and lots of friends but the thing I lack is the companionship of my mother. She never seems interested in me and will never have a woman-to-woman talk with me. When I am home she must know everything I do. If I go to my room to read she calls and asks for my doing. When we go out she never allows me to talk. My father is too busy to give any of his time to me.

Do you think there is anything wrong in five girls and five boys driving to a country club during the daytime? The group comes from the finest of families.

FIFTEEN. I imagine all your difficulties arise from the proposed day at the country club and that you have reshaped all past injustices to prove the injustice of not being allowed to go with the crowd. It is slightly contradictory to say your mother takes no interest in you and then tell how she wants to know what you are going. If she regards you as a child it may be because you are young to college companions. It also may be that you act like a child and the woman-to-woman attitude will come when you have proved your maturity.

I can see no objection to the country club outing unless you have given your mother reason to believe that you cannot conduct yourself with a group, or has some reason to disapprove of your friends. In any case, why not bring in a mediator, a friend, aunt or grandmother or friend of the family, to hear both sides and judge impartially.

My dear Mrs. Carr: I HAVE A FRIEND who lives in the same house in which I live, and ordinarily we get along fine, but he has one habit which I cannot understand; that is, after we have had some argument, when his friends or relatives drop in, he calls them aside and begins whispering about me to them. This has happened several times and it looks as if, in resentment, he wants to make enemies for me. After they have left, he is as nice to me as if nothing had happened. Just what could you advise in a case like this?

WONDERING.

The best remedy I know would be to let him alone for some time. Your friends are, evidently, showing you a mistaken kindness and a lack of sincerity with him, to tell you what he has whispered about. When they make their report, act as if you do not care to discuss it and laugh about it if you can. If it gets worse, tell him bluntly that this is rank disloyalty in a friend, besides denoting that he is not living up to the code of the gentleman you thought him.

DEAR MRS. CARR: I AM WRITING YOU in one of my sane moments. Please tell me what to do—honest, I'll do anything you say, just help me. I do not know what has come over me—I'm young, in my twenties. A year ago I worshipped the ground my children walked on; but now! I can hardly stand them; they make me so nervous, screaming and running around all day. I cannot understand myself. Some days I'm not so nervous. Yesterday my baby told me he hated me; they tell their daddy I beat them and I cry about the way I treat the children the day before. But next day it is the same old thing. If I could only send the children away a while! But I do not think I could be satisfied either.

I went to the clinic (my husband made me tell them about this) and they laughed when I talked to them about this—I will not go back now. They gave me some medicine that made me sleep for hours; but I was worse when I awoke. Am I losing my mind? I am so tired!

SO TIRED.

Of course you are not losing your mind; but any woman who is nervous at all will understand that these times come. Possibly all you need is to get away somewhere among the lovely gardens of the country where you could feel no responsibility; remembering that this is not an unusual need and that there isn't any tragedy about it. You may be overtaken by the time and, given a little change of scenery and opportunity to recover yourself, you will get back to normal.

You should go to some intelligent, skillful physician, one who understands his patients or possibly a psychiatrist who is sensible and practical as well as skillful. Perhaps one of these might suggest to you how to start building yourself back to health both physically and mentally. But right now, try not to feel that you are abnormal because you are nervous and cross with the family. Hundreds of women have been through the experience, and have tried to make the family know that the trouble does not come from the heart. Try to be doubly sweet and affectionate in your thought for them. Just talk it out with them a little if you can. Ask them to try to be patient just a little while.

IT'S ENVIRONMENT THAT COUNTS

Heredity of Secondary Importance in Rearing of Children, Scientists Say After Extensive Research Work at the University of Iowa.

By JAMES FOX

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

ONE OF THE FAVORITE SPOTS AT THE PRE-SCHOOL ON HOT SUMMER DAYS IS THIS SPECIALLY CONSTRUCTED TANK WITH ITS REGATTA OF BOATS.

nations of children let out for adoption. Iowa psychologists were giving intelligence tests. They made some startling observations. Environment, they found, could raise the intelligence of children—even though their inheritance of brain power apparently wasn't very great.

A mass of case histories which tell of feeble-minded children being brought to normal intelligence and of dull children becoming bright has forced a new point of view on America's psychologists.

Scientists measure the intelligence of a person in terms of his ability to learn. Their "yardstick" is the intelligence quotient—the I. Q. Until Stoddard began telling them differently, psychologists believed that the sins of the father passed on to the son, generations after generations, and that inherited mental weakness could not be changed. Intelligence was supposed to be about the same for father and son. Then the Iowa scientists began blowing straw in the counter wind.

It was a happy accident that the plasticity of young minds was discovered. In 1917, a Mrs. Cora Bussey Hill, remembering her own children who had died, argued that the state should pay as much attention to the welfare of children as to livestock. She finally got the State Legislature to establish a child welfare research station at the University of Iowa. The station, by working with the children and parents, has been able to amass volumes of evidence.

Supported by a million dollar grant from the Laura Spellman Rockefeller fund and the state appropriations, the station has followed the growth, mental and physical, of Iowa City children from birth.

Records on the nursery school children began showing half a dozen years ago that children's I. Q.'s rose as much as 20 points. The psychologists were startled. They had always believed that an individual's I. Q. represented his native intelligence and remained constant. The I. Q. test is considered dependable by scientists.

The first startling revelation in the facts about heredity and environment came in the research reported by Harold M. Skeels of the Iowa Child Welfare Research station. He told of the progress of several hundred illegitimate children. Dr. Skeels had been faced with practical problems concerning the placement and adoption of such children.

"These became wards of the state," says Dr. Skeels, "and are available to families who want children. At first, more or less as these children are certainly dull, routine, the mothers were given and we are reasonably sure that Stanford-Binet intelligence tests, the fathers are little brighter. Later on, tests were employed to check the growth of the children." Skeels discovered that 75 of the mothers reported on had an average I. Q. of 87. Thirteen per cent had I. Q.'s above 100; 28 per cent had I. Q.'s below 80.

The educational, social and economic status of the mothers was low. The fathers of all the illegitimate children used in the research were known. The fathers had averaged about 10 1/2 years of schooling. Slightly more than four per cent of the fathers were college graduates. Fifty per cent had not gone farther than the eighth grade.

Thirty-seven per cent of the fathers were of the lowest occupational class, day laborers or unemployed. Eighty per cent were in the lowest three classes of occupation.

"THESE children," Dr. Skeels reports, "were taken from their mothers at birth or shortly after and placed in 'good' homes, as judged by qualitative criteria. Such items as vocational security, cleanliness, freedom from excessive debt, standing in the community and general social competence were taken into consideration.

The illegitimate children were placed in the foster homes at an average age of 2 1/2 months, all being placed before the age of six months. "After a lapse of time, varying from one and a half, to six years, with an average of two years, these children were given intelligence tests. The average I. Q. was 116." Sixty-five per cent of the group had an I. Q. of 110 or above and 41 per cent an I. Q. of 120 or above. There were no children under 80. All the children had remarkably higher intelligence than their parents.

"It is to be noted," explains Dr. Skeels, "that there never has been any indication that these children were dull or feeble-minded. The only extraordinary thing about the study is its shock to our expectations. We had been led to believe that dull parents would have available to families who want children. At first, more or less as these children are certainly dull, routine, the mothers were given and we are reasonably sure that Stanford-Binet intelligence tests, the fathers are little brighter. Later on, tests were employed to measurements of the children reported experimental group, were placed on is the finding that rarely does in the stimulating environment of a day over a period of weeks in the scientific samplings, rise above an assigned and supervised by station staff members.

It so happens that the average I. Q. of 116, the mark set by children who were expected to be dull, equals that of the children of university professors and is about that of the highest occupational groupings.

"Moreover," Dr. Skeels will tell you, "as we look into the case histories of the mothers and fathers we discover a picture of economic and social inadequacy, of delinquent and criminal records, of frequent institutional care. There is nothing about the true parents in any way inconsistent with their low mental ratings. They are what is usually designated 'poor stock.'"

Nevertheless, they have produced bright children, the only significant factor being that their children were taken from their parents at a very early age and placed in what we believe to be good homes."

Even children whose mothers were definitely feeble-minded showed gains comparable to the other children.

Another dramatic study completed by the station showed that children in a large group will shift to the general intelligence of the group. Bright children, placed in an orphanage, showed losses in intelligence; the duller children moved upward in I. Q. to the average level of the group.

Skeels and three others of the station's staff, Ruth Updegraff, Beth L. Wellman and Harold M. Williams, completed a three-year study in one of Iowa's orphanages. Their life Kapurthala were a gown of corn colored crepe having a deep border according to age, mentality, intelligence, sex, nutritional status, and length of residence in the orphanage were used in the experiments.

One group was left in the normal racing week. Princess Karam of the orphanage. Their life Kapurthala were a gown of corn colored crepe having a deep border according to age, mentality, intelligence, sex, nutritional status, and length of residence in the orphanage were used in the experiments. The other children, forming the tulle gown and gold bees were em-results and the methods of obtaining them.

"For years," he points out, "we have adhered to the policy of giving serious attention to these criticisms, even though, on occasion, they are touched not with cold, but with the fire of heated debate."

These findings, the psychologists believe, put an additional burden on parents. In future homes it will be as essential for parents to provide an increasingly stimulating environment for mental growth as it now is for them to provide food for physical growth.

SCHOOLS, too, will consider the facts about environment in mapping their programs. Stoddard predicts for the future an educational program nicely fitted to the developing needs of the children.

"Theoretically," he says, "differences in intelligence would then be due entirely to physical conditions. The child would choose among possible outcomes the very best intellectual patterns, and these would be developed to their highest degree."

"What children need most in mental life," Stoddard says, "is a good start. This good start will be in habits of experiencing, of inquiring, of relating, of symbolizing. Differentials of birth, of heredity, tend to be wiped out by the stronger differentials in the dynamics of education and stimulation. A normal child may be made bright or feeble-minded by his environment."

A dynamic, vigorous man at 42, Stoddard is ready for a battle at every scientific meeting he attends. There are still some psychologists who want to see more proof.

The Iowa director expects a decisive victory for the theory that environment can raise and lower intelligence when the American Association of School Administrators meets in St. Louis next February.

Mid-Summer Fashions in Paris

PARIS, July 1.

ORGANDY embroidered in musical notes or printed in "tiled floor" blocks, silver dotted pique, and chenille spotted net make some of the smartest summer evening wear by Paris designers.

Foot-square blocks of color, looking like tiles, "pave" evening organdies in pastel shades of mauve, pink, green and blue, with gold or silver threads running between the blocks. Other organdies are embroidered in musical motifs carried out in shimmering colored lines.

White cotton pique is given a shimmering touch with blue straw hat of large dimensions and royal blue open-work pumps. Another smart Parisian matched her beige printed frock with a complete set of beige accessories, including a rolled up "Chamberlain."

Long gloves companioned short sleeves with suede or kid handbags swinging on an arm. Sashes and scarfs in two-toned chiffon floated in the breeze. Veils lent airy motion as women stepped along in high-heeled perforated pumps or openwork sandals.

bordered on the skirt of pale green satin Directoire evening dress worn by Mme. Jean Ralli.

Costumes worn at the races made just as colorful fashion news. Many printed, as well as plain costumes, were seen—all worn with smart accessories. The South American beauty, Mme. Martinez de Hoz, watched the races in a pale green printed foulard topped by a large hat of natural straw trimmed in pale green aglets. A diamond baret gleamed in her dark hair and two diamond clips held her girdle at the back.

The Princess Faugny Lucinge wore a royal blue and white floral printed crepe with a white-trimmed blue straw hat of large dimensions and royal blue open-work pumps. Another smart Parisian matched her beige printed frock with a complete set of beige accessories, including a rolled up "Chamberlain."

On Maintaining High Standards Of a Household

"Hold Fast to That Which Is Good, for You and Yours."

By Angelo Patri

"WE TRY to rear our children in the way we were reared. We want them to have good times but we think they can enjoy themselves without keeping late hours at road houses and dance halls, without smoking and drinking and petting. When we try to maintain our standards we are continually met with the wall. We are the only ones that aren't allowed. Everybody else can go but we have to lose all the good times. We'll be left out of everything."

When people live in the community that has standards close to their own, this problem is easier. The mothers get together and plan the entertainments and arrange for the safety as well as the pleasure of the children. The one or two families who refuse to help do not matter and soon are left out of consideration. If for one reason or another a family is forced into a community the standards of which do not measure up to theirs the difficulty is greater.

—O—

USUALLY the schools help, and always the churches. The young people have social meetings and entertainments and get to know each other enough to form a friendship based on common interests. This helps tremendously. Gifted children get together in groups that form instrumental quartets, and sometimes orchestras. Sometimes they form dramatic clubs and the group leader and the rehearsals offer fine opportunities for all kinds of parties. The grand performance at the end gives force to the long series of rehearsals.

Sometimes there is neither church nor school nor community support for the family stranded in an unsympathetic circle. Then the father and mother can do is to form the family into a group as self-sufficient as possible. In every neighborhood there are people who will lend themselves to strengthening such a group, and always are a few righteous men to save the city. And, when worst comes to worst, the head of the household can say, "As for me and my house, we serve the Lord."

—O—

WE ALL CRAVE human companionship, the encouragement of friends, the stimulation of other minds and other ways. We are privileged when we are placed so as to enjoy these delights. But if we find ourselves alone, in principle, then we stand alone. There is no other way. It takes courage and will and we are supposed to have both in store for time of need.

Children are alike the world over. They love the crowd, the dancing and the music and the noise. They like above all, to do what grown-up people do, especially when it is forbidden them, as smoking and drinking must be. It is quite too bad that people forget that their main teaching is done by example and that children learn mainly by imitation. They smoke and drink and pet if that is the pattern set before them by their elders. Particularly if these elders have the halo of smartness about their heads. Such people have a great deal to answer for if they have any conscience.

Fathers and mothers who are put to it to maintain standards of behavior in their families can hold to the idea that children are held by me home background. They wander from it during adolescence but they return later to the old standard and remain in it. Co-operate with the neighbors if possible. If not, hold fast to that which is good, for you and yours.

Marabou Wraps

The girl who likes fro-u-frou fashions is welcoming the return of marabou for summer evening wraps. Tiny boleros and little shoulder capes represent the most popular items and white ones are preferred to colors. A new development this season in the handling of marabou is the introduction of closely clipped versions so that the boleros are similar in appearance to the angora sweater jackets that have continued their vogue for several seasons. Stoles of very fluffy marabou are being adopted by more matronly followers of fashion trends who also are using the feathers to trim long, fitted evening wraps.

Shirtwaist Frock

A shirtwaist frock which has a blouse that differs from the skirt offers one example of the trend in tailored costumes for summer. Many different versions of this theme are seen in the St. Louis show. Striped blouses are allied with solid colored skirts, plain blouses are attached to checked skirts and even plaid and striped fabrics are being used together. The principal idea is to create an impression of a shirtwaist and separate skirt.

LET ME SUGGEST

By Josephine Walter

NOW is the time of year when good parents should come to the aid of their children and this isn't a completely altruistic theory, either. Because if something isn't done, and soon, mother is going to lose her sense of humor and Johnny is going to begin to contemplate the joys of the open road.

Child psychology is not, I know, my field, but into every household comes that crucial day, when the first joy of release from school has worn off and that plaintive wail, "Mommy, what shall I do?" begins to be heard throughout the land. Then, "Mommy," comes the question—what shall you do about it? Of course, the day camp for children who remain at home has made rapid strides within the past few years, but these camps are not within the family budget of all of us. Anyhow, many mothers feel that their children need relief from routine of any sort, others feel that they want the little dears around home for part of the year, and still others feel that their children should learn to find things to entertain themselves for a few months out of the year. Don't misunderstand me. I think these day camps are a grand idea, but I do think there are many other home solutions for the vacation problem, if given a little time and thought.

The backyard playground is the ideal solution for all home owners, no matter how small the backyard may be. It may entail some sacrifice on the part of the parents, especially garden enthusiasts or those who would like a badminton court or croquet ground, but it is well worth the saving in travel, nerves all around. And it must really be a playground where everything goes, even an attempt to "dig down to China." If possible, it should be divided from the rest of the yard by location, some type of boundary line such as shrubbery or a fence, and as far away from the outdoor sitting space of the family as possible so that childish prattle does not interfere with adult conversation.

WHEN IT COMES to equipping such a playground, the sky and your pocketbook are the only limits. However, the costliness of the equipment does not by any means gauge its appeal, for I have seen the most elaborate jungle gym abandoned in favor of an old tire suspended from a rope and the finest of play houses passed up in favor of a "store" that had been developed from old packing boxes. Space, too, is a factor and it is limited, but the type of play features may have to be given up but there are more than enough things to keep the busiest minds and hands satisfied.

Sand and water are two elements that should be in the playground of every small child. A boxed-in section of the yard for the little fellow and may range in style from a few boards nailed together, to the latest model, which is shaped like a boat with a real sail flapping in the breeze, which may be turned up by a real ship's wheel in the stern of the boat. For the older child, a sand dump without confining sides permits the busy "truckman" to drive his trucks in and out at will.

WATER is almost a "must-have" as it is a grand relaxer for hot, tired bodies as well as active minds. A garden hose is grand fun but an old washtub set into the ground is an ideal yacht basin for a toy fleet. Wading pools of canvas may be set up in any yard and it is a smart idea to build these up on some sort of a wooden platform so that when toys escape over the edge, and must be gotten, little feet land on clean boards and do not trail mud and dirt back into the water. If this isn't possible, keep a small tub of water by the wading pool and instruct the bathers to dip dirty feet into this before going back into the pool.

A TREE HOUSE is one of those heavenly spots where little souls may soar into the clouds, leaving the mundane earth and its people completely behind, a grand release in times of stress. Particularly valuable if dad and the boys build it together as a family project and well-high perfection if an old telescope or a pair of binoculars can be found for gazing out to sea. And don't forget to pack a lunch for hardy mariners who are apt to be sailing the bounding main at lunch time. An old hammock, intended strictly for juvenile use, will save the regular garden furniture from muddy feet and will also provide a grand starting point for voyages into the unknown.

If you have any discarded chairs or bits of furniture kicking around in the basement, you could give them to no more conscientious workmen than the little men and women in the back yard. Painting has an allure even for the smallest and may be done with as extravagant gestures as possible and with no injury to bodies or clothes if you get cold-water paint which will wash off without the aid of turpentine. A few yards of 10-cent material and a few nails and a hammer will insure you an unpolstering "job" well done. And also, happy and smiling faces around the house.

Little Martin Spellman Was Selling Papers and Magazines in Front of Studio When Discovered

By H. H. Niemeyer
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

MARTIN SPELLMAN, 12 YEARS OLD AND HEADED FOR STARDOM, DIRECTORS HAVE COMMENTED ON THE "SPIRITUAL QUALITY" REFLECTED IN HIS FACE.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 1. HORATIO ALGER did not even hear of when he finished writing about Ragged Dick and other Cinderella boys of New York, for that was before the turn of the century. Think what a time he could have now telling about the kids out here who have started with nothing at all and wound up by demanding an accounting from their parents of the two or three million dollars earned in pictures while they were still in their teens or being sued by their grandfathers for a share in those millions.

Some of those youngsters began, just as did the late Horatio's kid heroes, by selling papers. Take the latest likely movie sensation, little Martin Spellman. Martin never heard of Mr. Alger, and his favorite author is none other than Clark Gable. Maybe you never knew that Clark was an author but he wrote one thing which is little Martin's idea of something grand. It's only a letter, at that, but it hangs over Martin Spellman's bed where he can read it the last thing every night and the first thing every morning.

Martin has proudly exhibited this letter to practically every kid in his neighborhood—so much so that it is now patched and held together by glue and kept in a small black frame.

With considerable eye straining it still can be read and the signature, Clark Gable, is easily recognized. In this three-paragraph note, the secret of how Master Spellman crashed the movies is revealed. And Gable is particularly proud of his young protégé, because it was through him that Martin got his break. But getting back to the letter, Big-hearted Clark stated that he missed Martin's smile in front of MGM peddling his papers and his magazines, but that he was glad he was doing so well in pictures. For several years, 12-year-old Martin sold papers and magazines in front of the Culver City studio. During that time he got to know such personages as Gable, Myrna Loy, Director Norman Taurog, and other biggies. Because Martin always had a big smile, he never missed a sale. As a matter of fact, his mother made him start a bank account.

Martin's pals in Santa Monica, where the Spellman family resides in a modest six-room house, were always wondering why he didn't put the touch on the big movie stars for an acting job. But Martin had other ideas. "I didn't want to be an actor. You don't last long enough. Besides, I was getting along okay selling my papers and magazines. Some weeks I made as much as $6. Anyhow, Dad wanted me to go to college and study aviation."

That was Martin's ambition number one. Ambition number two at the time was to win a shiny red bicycle—the prize to the youngster selling the highest number of magazines. When Christmas rolled around, Martin really went to town trying to boost his sales. He not only wanted that bicycle, but Christmas meant presents to his mother and father and a younger brother and sister. And then there was the question of a more expensive gift to the girl next door.

One night Clark Gable stopped outside the studio to buy a paper from his favorite salesman. At that time, Gable was busy making "Test Pilot." Martin happened to mention his Christmas dilemma to the star. The next morning a member of the casting department came to Martin and said that Mr. Gable had a few days' work in his picture for him. It might get that present for the girl friend. After considerable thought, Martin told the man he would think it over and let him know. The result was that he finally gave in. So, in "Test Pilot," Martin became an extra. His first and last job in that capacity.

The girl friend got the present. Soon afterwards, a publicity photographer snapped a picture of Martin selling a magazine to Myrna Loy. The shot was given wide publicity, with the result that many directors around the lot started to comment on the "spiritual quality" reflected in the kid's face.

One of these directors was Norman Taurog, who was soon to start directing "Boys Town." In the script was a role which required just this quality. He decided to take a chance and give the youngster the part.

When the picture was previewed, Mr. Taurog found himself with another discovery on his hands. "I didn't believe it. Why should he give up a profitable newspaper career? Mrs. Spellman says it was quite a while before she could persuade him to turn over his newspapers and magazines to his younger brother because he had a movie career ahead of him. He was especially hard to persuade because he had just won that shiny red bicycle."

Martin told his mother he would think it over. "Gosh, I wanted to think about it first before starting out on a picture career," the curly-headed kid stated. "After all, I had my own business and I didn't want to start out in pictures and maybe later have to go back to my paper stand. Mr. Gable and Miss Loy would laugh at me." But Martin decided to take a chance. He turned over his paper stand to his brother, who also boasts a big smile. But Martin is a business man, and he made a deal whereby he would receive a cut out of the weekly business.

Monogram was about ready to start a feature entitled, "I Am a Criminal," starring John Carroll. In it was a big role for a kid, who played, properly enough, a newsboy. Martin, who was spotted by the studio boss, Scott R. Dunlap, was given a test and awarded the role. Preview notices acclaimed the new star.

Incidentally, when the picture was first previewed to newspaper critics, Martin was at some small neighborhood show seeing for the fifth time, "Test Pilot."

Then came the biggest part in Martin's screen career. Jackie Cooper—now grown up—was soon to start "Streets of New York." Next to Jackie's role in importance was the part of "Gimpy," an orphaned cripple. Martin was given the part. Throughout the entire picture, Jackie and Martin worked together on and off the set. Before Spellman says it was quite a while before she could persuade him to turn over his newspapers and magazines to his younger brother because he had a movie career ahead of him. He was especially hard to persuade because he had just won that shiny red bicycle.

Martin told his mother he would think it over. "Gosh, I wanted to think about it first before starting out on a picture career," the curly-headed kid stated. "After all, I had my own business and I didn't want to start out in pictures and maybe later have to go back to my paper

Martin is a real boy. Ask his mother. Before he was signed to a long-term contract with Monogram, Mrs. Spellman requested of the studio head to add a special stipulation stating that Martin couldn't ride his motor-bike. He was scaring his mother and father to death every time he ventured on the vehicle.

The studio did just that, and made a special point of telling Martin. Martin replied that he couldn't ride his bike, then the studio would have to buy it, because he wasn't going to waste any of his money. After all, business is business.

One day Martin got home a little too late for supper. He was sporting a big black eye. Refusing to tell his mother where he got it, he finally broke down and said the fellow across the street threw rocks at him. "Why?" his mother queried. "You both always got along so well." "Well," Martin answered, "he said I had too much for my age and that he didn't have anything." "What did you do?" asked Mr. Spellman. "Nothing. I told him I'd take him to the movies Saturday."

Already three pictures have been lined up for Martin at Monogram. He will play the title role in the Dickens novel, "Oliver Twist." He will also do "His Father's Son," and "Son of the Navy."

But one thing, Martin is still determined that he is going to college and study aeronautics just like his father, who is employed by the Douglas Aircraft Corporation.

More Liberal Infant Diet Recommended

Semi-Solids Now Added Very Early—Iron Also Is Given Baby.

By Logan Clendenning, M. D.

THE growing infant's diet is recommended to be more liberal than was formerly thought necessary. Cereals and other semi-solid foods are added now very early, whether the baby is on mother's milk or not. One of the most important improvements in artificial feeding resulted from the discovery that cow's milk, very often mother's milk, is deficient in iron. Many pediatricians give infants small doses of iron from the very beginning, thus reducing the incidence of anemia.

At six weeks of age the baby should have orange juice, one-half ounce in half an ounce of water, sweetened and fed with a spoon once a day. Cod liver oil, a teaspoonful, should be given once a day before a feeding. This is increased as time goes on to three teaspoonfuls.

As early as two months, according to good authority, certainly in the third and fourth month, the baby should have a cereal. Any nutritious cereal will do—cream of wheat, oatmeal or corn mush. It should be cooked at least an hour, fed with boiled milk, warm, sweetened with ordinary cane sugar.

At five months add some vegetable soup to the baby's menu. This should contain some lean chopped meat and chopped carrots, barley and rice enough to cook it into a soup.

At nine to ten months the milk formula can be changed to whole milk with no added sugar. A soft-boiled egg yolk should be added once a day or every other day.

The time schedule now will go as follows:

6 a. m.—eight ounces of milk.
9 a. m.—one ounce of orange juice, diluted with one ounce of water.

10 a. m.—two heaping tablespoonfuls of cooked cereal; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

2 p. m.—six to eight ounces of milk; egg yolk, or vegetable soup; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

5 p. m.—eight ounces of milk; one to two heaping tablespoonfuls of cereal; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

10 to 12 p. m.—eight ounces of milk, if hungry.

At 10 months include gelatin and custard.

At one year, bacon, scraped beef or finely-divided calf, beef or lamb liver can be added.

FROM NOW ON remember the essential foods for the infant and child are milk, meat, fruit, eggs, vegetables. Candy and concentrated sweets are to be strictly avoided. They spoil the appetite and keep the child from eating foods that are essential to health.

The commonest error in child feeding (over one year) diet is to give too much carbohydrate—sugar and starch; too much cereal, bread, potatoes and puddings, etc. This means that the child does not get enough minerals and vitamins. The next commonest error in feeding the child of a year or more is the feeding of too much milk. This may sound peculiar after all the insistence on the value of milk. But too much milk to children from one year to six years means poor appetite, and they are anemic and irritable.

Country Shoes

COUNTRY shoes have a comfortable appearance in spite of their gaudy shades and extreme lines. There are suede boots that slip on like a pair of grandfathers' old house shoes and tie snugly at the back, coolie sandals that are made of woven straps attached to thick soles, oxfords that are designed with square heels and toes, moccasins that are as colorful as the genuine Indian variety, and numerous sturdy sabots which have under-slung heels. Soles turn up over the toes of some new sports shoes and heels of others are equally as sensational. Plaid kidskin, awning

Cooking A ROAST

By George Rect

FOR some time I have been hearing about roasting a low oven temperature method of cooking requires method and perhaps you will be a little skeptical, as I did have been schooled in the oven temperature for roasting and then lower temperature and frequent basting high cooking.

Just a few days ago I was with the chef of a prominent hotel in the city. He gave me this idea a trial. In the oven a 20-pound roast at 250 degrees. The door was sealed for an hour and during that period large roast of meat was always at the same temperature. We then removed the roast and placed it on a scale. It weighed 16 pounds, having four pounds in the cooking a small amount of sauce. The roasting pan, which contained almost two liquid, mostly the "au jus" juice of the beef.

Then for the carving—allice, as expected, was done but quite moist. The roast right in half found it medium rare and with natural juice, which was surprising because there was no basting.

It looks as though I was to swallow the words I read several years ago, that the roast in the oven if the is spending the afternoon movies. Well, anyway, we learn.

There is nothing quite refreshing on a hot day as the luncheon or dinner plate of soup. Many of the delicious soups may be pureed and only need chilling in the refrigerator before serving; but since you are all familiar with these, there is no need to don't already know their goodness. What I do is to give you a recipe for something a little different for jellied cucumber soup.

THE INGREDIENTS: Four cups cucumber, three pints parsley, one three sprigs water, one pickle spice, salt and white two tablespoons gelatin, one tablespoon strained leek cucumbers and chopped pulp to cucumber. Put cucumber with three pints of water, sliced onion, parsley and spice. Bring to boiling and simmer for one hour (there should be a little quantity of cucumber conserved season to taste with salt and pepper. Soak gelatin in water to cover for five minutes. Pour into hot strained cucumber soup. Cool slightly, add lemon juice to shallow pan. Pour cucumber soup into refrigerator until firm. Chop with a knife in cups with a spoonful sour cream on top.

Here is a recipe for eggs, San Remo: For cooked eggs, one small egg, one-fourth cup oil, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sauce, one tablespoon lemon juice, few drops sauce.

CUT EGGS in halves and scrape yolks into a bowl. Take care not to break yolks. Remove skin and bones and mash them with yolks, adding the keto esterhiser, lemon juice, etc. Fill whites with sauce. Place each half on a plate. Stuff hearts with sauce. Serve with white sauce.

NOW FOR something haven't thought about of Sundays. Perhaps like to try this savory change. It is lamb heart style. Two lamb hearts, bread crumbs, cold water, spoon sage, one teaspoon tablespoons minced onion, spoon parsley, finely chop, two tablespoons butter.

Prepare hearts by washing with a wet cloth. Moisten with cold water, lightly with spoon, taking to have them wet. Add ingredients and mix in spoon. Stuff hearts with crumb mixture and skewer or tie hearts secure place of white string. Oven casserole, add to cover and start to cook (450 degrees) for first 30 minutes. Then, reduce heat to (325 degrees) and cook for, or about an hour. Serve with thickened mashed potatoes.

Ham and biscuits on Two cups cooked ham, three cups butter, three flour, one in Juliennes. Put on bottom of oven. Make cream sauce by blending in flour a smooth and boiling pot. Pour cream sauce over ham. Bake in hot oven (375 degrees) for 20 minutes.

Cooking A ROAST

By George Rector

FOR some time I have been hearing about roasting meat at low even temperature. This method of cooking requires no basting and perhaps you will feel a little skeptical, as I did at first, having been schooled in the high oven temperature for searing and browning and then lower temperature and frequent basting for thorough cooking.

Just a few days ago I arranged with the chef of a prominent hotel to give this idea a trial. We placed in the oven a 20-pound rib roast. The temperature of the oven was set at 250 degrees. The glass oven door was sealed for an even six hours and during that period this large roast of meat was cooking—always at the same temperature.

We then removed the roast and placed it on a scale. It weighed exactly 16 pounds, having lost only four pounds in the cooking, which is a small amount of shrinkage. The roasting pan, which was dry when the meat was placed in it, contained almost two cups of liquid, mostly the "au jus" or natural juice of the beef.

Then for the carving—the first slice, as expected, was fairly well done but quite moist. Then we cut the roast right in half and we found it medium rare and oozing with natural juice, which was most surprising because there had been no basting.

It looks as though I would have to swallow the words I wrote several years ago, that the roast fares badly in the oven if the housewife is spending the afternoon at the movies. Well, anyway, we live and learn.

There is nothing quite so refreshing on a hot day as to start the luncheon or dinner with a jellied soup. Many of these delicious soups may be purchased in cans and only need thorough chilling in the refrigerator before serving; but since I know that you are all familiar with these, there is little to say that you don't already know about their goodness. What I want to do is to give you a recipe for something a little different, a recipe for jellied cucumber consommé.

—THE INGREDIENTS:—
Four cups cucumber, chopped; three pints water, one onion, sliced; three sprigs parsley, one teaspoon pickle spice, salt and white pepper, two tablespoons gelatin, cold water, one tablespoon strained lemon juice. Peel cucumbers and chop enough pulp to yield four cups. Put in saucepan with three pints of water, sliced onion, parsley and pickle spice. Bring to boiling point and let simmer for one hour. Strain (there should be a little over a quart of cucumber consommé) and season to taste with salt and white pepper. Soak gelatin in cold water to cover for five minutes, then stir it into the hot strained consommé. Cool slightly, add lemon juice and strain into shallow pan which has been rinsed with cold water. Chill in refrigerator until firm enough to chop with a knife. Serve in cups with a spoonful of thick sour cream on top.

Here is a recipe for stuffed eggs, San Remo: Four hard-boiled eggs, one small can sardines, one-fourth cup ketchup, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one tablespoon strained lemon juice, few drops tabasco sauce.

—CUT EGGS IN halves lengthwise and scrape yolks into mixing bowl, taking care not to break the whites. Remove skin and bones from sardines and mash them with the egg yolks, adding the ketchup, Worcestershire, lemon juice and tabasco. Fill whites with the mixture and place each half on a crisp lettuce leaf. Serve as an hors d'oeuvre, with or without dressing.

NOW FOR something that we haven't thought about in a month of Sundays. Perhaps you would like to try this savory dish for a change. It is lamb hearts, family style: Two lamb hearts, two cups bread crumbs, cold water, one teaspoon sage, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons minced onion, one tablespoon parsley, finely chopped, one tablespoon celery leaves, finely chopped, two tablespoons melted butter.

Prepare hearts by wiping clean with a wet cloth. Moisten bread crumbs with cold water, tossing lightly with spoon, taking care not to have them wet. Add balance of ingredients and mix lightly with spoon. Stuff hearts with bread crumb mixture and skewer together or tie hearts securely with a piece of white string. Put hearts in oven casserole, add cold water over (450 degrees) uncovered for first 30 minutes. Then cover casserole, reduce to moderate (325 degrees) and cook until tender, or about an hour and a half. Serve with thickened gravy and mashed potatoes.

Ham and biscuits on casserole: Two cups cooked ham, three tablespoons butter, three tablespoons flour, three cups milk. Cut ham in julienne strips and put on bottom of oven casserole. Make cream sauce by melting butter, blending in flour and gradually adding milk, stirring until smooth and boiling point is reached. Pour cream sauce over ham and cover top with baking powder biscuits. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) for 20 minutes.

OFF THE RECORDS

By Thomas B. Sherman

NATHAN MILSTEIN has evidently been under contract with Columbia for a long time but until the July releases he has never been permitted to make a record that carried any sort of accurate impression of his superior talents. The few Milstein records in existence are of short and rather inconsequential pieces. He should have been making records of all the major concertos for his eloquence, sanity and musical breadth are as discernible from the discs as from concert performances. Columbia now makes a start, at least, by allowing him to make the Beethoven Sonata No. 8 in G Major for piano and violin.

Assisted by Artur Balsam, theorists have been played several times and the surface noises thereby reduced to a minimum. Admirers of Feodor Chaliapin, a unique artist as well as an artist great in his natural and acquired characteristics, will be interested in the several single records which have been released since his death. One of the most interesting is the Victor record of the song, "Doubt," by Glinka, and the traditional Russian song called "Night." This music needs the interpretation of a Russian, or of a singer so steeped in Russian feeling that he can express its rather self-conscious heart searching without seeming too mawkish. Chaliapin had that natural qualification. He also had the most precise control over his voice and could use it to express a great variety and a quick succession of emotions.

AN UNUSUALLY GOOD recording from the standpoint of musical technique and acoustical engineering is the Tchaikowsky Serenade (Victor 3 records) which has been executed by the British Broadcasting Co.'s orchestra under the direction of Adrian Boult. As for the music I can only say that those who like that sort of thing will like this. "Tchaikowsky's" music has a far-reaching persuasiveness though it effects me like a neurotic 15-year-old college boy, drunk and in love with an actress. But as I said this is a splendid recording.

The blue ribbon album in Columbia's July group of records is undoubtedly Sebastian Bach's Partita No. 6 (2 records) played by Walter Gieseking. To describe this piano playing as masterly is a very circumspect use of the word. Gieseking presents all of the inherent nobility and greatness of the music without neglecting the directness of its appeal. The music is full of a singing poetic spirit. Mr. Gieseking being no believer in a dry Bach makes his keyboard plastic. He uses the pedal, softening the edge of the phrase, gives the lighter numbers a charming sentiment and the more profound ones a searching, poignant beauty. And with it all the structure is kept clear and strong.

The most characteristic, if not the best, of all Dvorak's chamber works in the String Quartet No. 8 in E Flat Major (Columbia 4 records) which has been recorded by the famous Lener String Quartet. In this music Dvorak goes to the folk of his native Bohemia and their Slavic neighbors for its color and its rhythmic character and the distinctive melodic material is organized with a maximum effectiveness. The opening statement of the first movement, and the first movement in general, has an overpowering emotional appeal, an appeal which is made all the stronger by the richness of its performance.

THE TONE QUALITY of the Lener quartet sometimes gets a little heavy, or it seems so, at least, in the records. The virtue of this occasional defect is depth and eloquence of tone. And the musicianship of the group is unchallengeable. The acoustical quality of the recording is very good after the record.

Orson Welles, In Vaudeville, Still Has Ideas

For Example, He Would Enter Films if They'd Let Him Start at Top.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 1. ORSON WELLES and his Mercury Theater are in vaudeville, playing the five-day. After an opening week at the Palace in Chicago, where Welles is regarded as a brilliant if somewhat eccentrically precocious native son, the Mercury Theater moved its streamlined version of William Archer's "The Green Goddess" to the stage of the Stanley Theater here in Pittsburgh. Some may think that the Mercury Theater, one of Broadway's most ambitious legitimate producing organizations, has suffered a serious comedown in taking to the vaudeville stage. To Welles, however, vaudeville is the lesser of two necessary evils.

"I need money—lots of it—to support the Mercury Theater in the manner to which I would like to have it become accustomed," Welles said. "I am making good money in vaudeville now. If it lasts long enough, I'll be able to do some of the things I want to do next fall. If I cannot make enough money in vaudeville, I will have to accept a Hollywood offer."

Welles does not want to go to Hollywood yet, or at least not under the terms currently offered him. He wants primarily to produce and direct pictures, secondarily to act in them. An ideal arrangement, from his point of view, would be a chance to produce and act in his own pictures.

Hollywood is eager to cash in on the national publicity Welles received for frightening some credulous radio listeners with his broadcast of a fictitious assault on the world by the Men from Mars. Hollywood, however, is not ready to offer Welles anything more than an acting job. It will let him choose his own role, more or less, but that is as far as it is now prepared to go.

So, in preference to Hollywood, Welles took to vaudeville, long since reported to be dying if not already coldly dead. It must be many years since a star turned down Hollywood to put on a vaudeville show five times a day, between showings of a feature picture.

After the world premiere of the Mercury Theater's capsule presentation of "The Green Goddess" about lunch time one Saturday, Welles made a certain speech to an appreciative and friendly audience in which he said he thought that the Mercury Theater's vaudeville venture proved that vaudeville, like the legitimate theater, "is on the way back."

Welles has a good deal of fun being the suave maharajah in the role that made a star of George Arliss a good many years ago, and candidly reported that "The Green Goddess" had been streamlined without the slightest difficulty.

"Now that we've condensed the piece down to less than 20 minutes," he said, "I don't see how Arliss ever was able to stretch the play through three acts."

In Chicago, incidentally, Welles was billed as "The Man Who Terrified the World—and Then Charmed It." It makes Welles wince a little. Vaudeville being merely a means of raising money for Mercury Theater projects on the legitimate stage, the real question is, "What are Welles' plans?" He wants to go back again to "The Five Kings," the Shakespeare chronicle, plays that he tried briefly last season. He wants to add an hour to the already long production of last season, to make the whole thing more than five hours long, with a rest half way through for dinner.

"The extra hour," he said, "makes the difference between a complete, understandable whole and a patch-work."

"The Five Kings" is a costly, ambitious production, but it ranks now on the top of Welles' list. He has a play titled "Gaalight," a mystery by Patrick Hamilton (author of "Rope"), which he would like to try this summer with Ruth Gordon, if he can find time between money-making efforts. The chances are, however, that "Gaalight" will have to be put off.

Then he would like to do "Twelfth Night," but departing drastically from the traditional staging to set the play on the French Riviera in the 1890s, with Peter Arno colonels and other "props" appropriate to the gay 90s.

Black evening dresses that are made of silk and rayon jersey or of sheer materials are regarded with favor, as are sheer daytime frocks of the afternoon type. Black and white themes likewise indicate that there is a sober emphasis favoring practicality to cope with the juvenile and gay themes of the spring and early summer seasons.

Black costumes Of Light Weight

After such an avalanche of "little-girl" fashions created for mother as well as for her daughter, it is interesting to observe so many black costumes of summer weight on display in St. Louis. Several Parisian designers have launched a vogue of black for daytime and for evening, so the trend as observed here is in line with a movement fostered at the French fashion centers.

World's Fair Crowds Like Rowdier Fun

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).

ETERNAL Broadway showmen are getting an overnight education in the amusements business from their experiences at the World's Fair crowds. The formulas that customarily are successful on New York's Rialto need, the impresarios have discovered, considerable revision before they are attractive to the visitors at the exhibition.

When the Fair first opened, the plan was to present opera, musicals and similar intellectual entertainment. And such programs were presented for a few nights, but the audience consisted of row in row of empty seats.

"Then the showmen started acting natural, came off their pedestals and asked the audiences what they wanted," John Krimsky, director of the Fair's amusements, said. "We found out we had to speed up shows, not make them too arty, get names and personalities into the casts. Also, the audience is not one which plans a whole evening for a single show as you encounter on Broadway, but the audience that is continually passing and once it passes your door it is lost."

Krimsky, a successful producer of both Broadway shows and motion pictures of the "arty" variety, abandoned his own plans for something of the concert hall type and presented a Wild West rodeo show, "The New Yorkers and visitors went for it with the zest and enthusiasm that was so evidently lacking when they saw the Fair's earlier grand opera."

With Ruth Mix, daughter of Tom Mix, and Col. Zack Miller of the 101 Ranch, leading a company of riders and ropers gathered from Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona, Wyoming, Montana and Mexico, Krimsky presents a rodeo that includes all the more virile feats of the Wild West, enhanced by such musical comedy trappings as fetching chorines attired in cowgirl costumes so scanty that the whole outfit would hardly be expensive enough to provide a mere neckerchief for a real cowgirl.

Another show edited down to World's Fair proportions is the recent Broadway hit, "The Hot Mikado." Where the Broadway production ran the conventional two and one-half hours, it has now been streamlined down to a one-hour performance for Fair visitors.

Bill Robinson, the suave "Bojangles" dancer, still heads the cast and in this brief version of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta his stunts on the stage, in comparison, considerably longer and more satisfying. In the longer Broadway version there was criticism against Robinson, as the Mikado did not come on stage until the second act.

But nothing at the Fair is succeeding quite like Billy Rose's big "Aquacade," the water carnival. According to figures which Rose gladly gives out, the enterprise is seen by 38 per cent of those who come in the front gate, is clearing $52,000 a week and ought to make a million before the Fair closes.

Auto News and Notes

A 1903 SINGLE-CYLINDER ENGINE, that is part of the historical exhibit at the Cadillac-Lafayette plant, took the automobile industry's spotlight when F. S. Bennett of London, England, visited Detroit. It was Bennett who, using a similar engine, arranged the "parts interchangeability test" that was credited with overcoming the sales resistance to American cars abroad.

"I was the Cadillac distributor in England, although frankly not distributing many," he said. "Europeans granted that while American workmen might produce a 'fair' bicycle, they were unskilled in the finer mechanics required in automobile manufacturing. To combat the fallacy with factual evidence, I requested the Royal Automobile Club to sponsor a test that would indisputably prove American methods were founded on precision practices unequalled even by fine European cars. My plan was to dismantle three automobiles that could be verified as stock Cadillac models, then reassemble the cars. As an added handicap, we extracted a number of parts from the jumbled heap of 2000 and substituted parts from our stockroom. To the amazement of observers, the Cadillacs were put perfectly at the completion of the program."

The "parts interchangeability test" won for Cadillac the first of two Dewar trophies, annually awarded by the Royal Automobile Club for an outstanding achievement. This honor, coupled with wide publicity on the test itself, boomed sales of American cars abroad and contributed much to the prestige they still enjoy.

MEMBERS OF THE SERVICE and Parts Managers' Bureau, Greater St. Louis Automotive Association, made an inspection trip through the lubricating oil manufacturing plant and the motor research laboratory at the Shell Oil Co. Inc., refinery at the Shell Oil Co. Inc. on Thursday afternoon. Speakers at the dinner, which was served at the De Soto Hotel following the tour, were R. H. McKenzie, district manager for Shell; Joe Jurey of the Shell Oil Co. Inc. industrial department; Wallace T. Gardham and Jos. A. Schlecht of the Bureau. A technical film of the Shell "Share the Road" program was shown.

PROMOTION OF A. R. BOSCHOW to assistant to the general sales manager and the appointment of Richard H. Grant as advertising manager, is announced by W. A. Blees, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Division, Nash-Kelvinator Corporation. Boschow, who has been director of advertising and merchandising for Nash since 1937, will retain executive supervision of these activities in addition to his new duties. Grant goes to the Nash home office from Geyer, Cornell & Newell, Inc., advertising agency for Nash. He has been directing advertising and public relations on the West Coast for the past two years for Nash. David Williamson, automotive editor of the San Francisco News, will replace Grant on the coast.

J. E. TRAVIS OF ST. CHARLES was elected president of the board of directors of the Missouri Automobile Dealers' Association at the first convention which was held at Hotel Chase here. Roland H. Record of Kansas City was elected vice-president, George Berry, St. Louis, treasurer, and Joseph A. Schlecht, St. Louis, secretary. The following were elected members of the Executive Committee: N. S. O'Neill and Roland H. Record of Kansas City; J. M. Allton of Columbia; Howard Fetz of Springfield; Fred A. Groves of Cape Girardeau; George M. Berry and D. E. Castles of St. Louis and J. E. Travis of St. Charles. Directors of the St. Louis District to be elected were: F. H. Riesmeyer of Webster Groves and L. M. Stewart of St. Louis for a term of two years; G. M. Berry and D. E. Castles of St. Louis and Mr. J. E. Travis of St. Charles are carry-over directors and will serve for one more year.

THE CHRYSLER FRAME HAS been improved by increased strength resistance in the front cross-member. The frame is carried out to the extreme rear of the body with two cross-members giving extra strength and rigidity to the rear section. The entire body is supported by a chassis with a rear bumper is bolted to the horns of the side-member making it an integral part of the frame construction. This increases its capacity for protecting the car from injury.

ONE OF THE MOST RECENT contributions to air navigation is a light which is automatically turned on by radio when the plate crosses over specific points, and is visible on the pilot's instrument board. United Air Lines, which has been experimenting with the "cone of silence" marker beacon, the light is known, has already begun the use of the device in its regular schedules on the New York-Chicago-California and Seattle-San Diego airways. Following installation which has been undertaken by the Civil Aeronautics Authority as an airways improvement project, the company has placed special ultra-high short-wave receivers on its Mainliners to pick up the new radio signals which flash on the indicator lights. "Cone of silence" transmitters have been installed at 30 points on the routes flown by United. These transmitters are at stations transmitting regular directional radio range signals. When a plane, equipped with the new receiver, crosses one of these "check points" the light flashes simultaneously as the pilot hears through his earphones the identifying code signal of the transmitting station, giving him an exact identification as a motorist has from signposts.

THE NASH BED CAR IS BEING given a special showing and demonstration this week by the Nash St. Louis Co., the Nash distributor. Mr. L. M. Sprinkle, president of Nash St. Louis Co., explained that the rear compartment of every Nash sedan may be transformed in five minutes into a six-foot double bed by means of exclusive Nash features. "The result, of course, is an actual home on wheels," he said. Hunters and fishermen can camp on location, and tourists no longer need to worry about the whereabouts of the nearest hotel or tourist home. Automotive comfort and convenience advancements, such as the Nash bed and the "Weather Eye," he said, are making touring America's favorite summer sport. Features resulting in greater economy in traveling are believed responsible for Nash's rise in touring popularity. He cited the bed-in-car as example, pointing out that the bed saves up to 25 percent of traveling expenses by eliminating lodging costs.

FIVE MODELS OF FORD-made cars which have made automotive history, including the only six-cylinder car that Henry Ford ever built, are features of the Ford Exposition at the New York World's Fair. Five of the newest Ford-built cars, with special paint jobs, provide a contrast. The exhibit includes the first car built by the Ford Motor Co. after it was formed in 1903; the only six-cylinder Ford car in 1908, a 2000-pound, $2800 model; the first Ford built in 1909; the first Ford V-8, the Mercury, the Lincoln-Zephyr and the Lincoln. There is also the first gasoline engine that Henry Ford built.

THE 237-ACR2 PONTIAC AUTO plant stands over the spot where Chief Ford, almost 200 years ago, plotted against Fort Pontchartrain and its garrison which guarded the settlement de troit (city of the straits) which has become the motor capital of the hemisphere. The trail he followed is the route followed by Woodward avenue, the 200-foot wide superhighway that connects Detroit and Pontiac, Mich.

THREE GROUPS OF DODGE executives, headed by Frank J. Timmens, general sales manager; Tom W. Moss, director of truck sales; and Don P. Stanton, director of sales, have started from the factory to conduct regional sales meetings with special emphasis on truck sales. The prime purpose of the sessions, according to Moss, is to assist in further developing Dodge sales representatives and dealers "transportation experts." "It has been our aim for many years to have our field men and dealers established as transportation authorities in their particular localities," he said. "Consequently, we have been completing in this respect but we are continuing to train our personnel to become efficient not only in merchandising, servicing and selling but in giving expert opinions and advice to truck owners on their own problems and needs."

DETROIT'S RECENT decision to provide one-way streets to speed vehicle flow was made after extensive study of traffic. Science contributed to the survey with the traffic counter, an electrical registering device each car passes it. A hose filled with compressed air extends halfway across the street. As each car drives over it, an impulse is conveyed to the traffic counter, which automatically divides the impulses by two, in order to determine each car a unit, and prints a reading each half hour. John Wood, assistant chief engineer of Chevrolet, cooperated in the survey.

VACATIONISTS WHO HAVE the pocket-size "Vacation Check Book" aren't likely to leave lights burning in their homes, forget driver's licenses or be caught short on supplies. They'll know that if they do for sunburn and how to give first aid, too, for such information is also included in this booklet. It is published and distributed by Studebaker. Last year 44,200 requests were received for copies. The second edition is now ready for distribution. Check lists in the booklet are arranged under such headings as "What to Take for Your Car," "Before You Leave Home," "Stopping Overnight," "If You Are Camping Out." Also included are information on what to have done to your car before starting on a trip, what to take for your car, how to save gasoline, first aid, speed laws, fire prevention. There's an expense record on the back of each booklet. New in this year's booklet are two brief articles on the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Exposition.

A course in how to drive the modern automobile will be presented at a regular high school curriculum in the fall when a special class in motor vehicle operation will be opened for students more than 14 years old. The high school at Highland Park, Mich. Realistic apparatus for teaching the course was built to special design for the high school in the Detroit factories of Plymouth. Credits will be given to students who complete the course. Part of their vocation, for such work. Other students not taking the work may elect the driving course without credit as a study. If the experiment succeeds, the course will be set up as a separate elective course open to all students.

HERE AND THERE

Against Intolerance in America, at 1 p. m. Tuesday on the WJZ net, will include talks by William Allen White, Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, songs by Lawrence Tibbett and the Hall Johnson Choir, a playlet acted by Melvyn Douglas and Helen Gahagan, of the movies. It will come from San Francisco and New York.

KENNY BAKER, the tenor, will not sing with Jack Benny when the comedian returns to the air in the fall. He has been signed to a contract, at a salary said to be $2000 a week, to sing and act in the Star Theater. . . . Joe Penner is to have a Friday night spot on the WJZ net and KWK in September. James Melton, the comedian, is singing in the Cincinnati grand opera in addition to the Sunday night radio concerts. He is billed in "Manon," "La Traviata," "Madame Butterfly" and other works.

A series featuring Beatrice Lillie is being offered for sponsorship. . . . Michael Loring, musical comedy and movie baritone, is singing on the CBS net at 5:15 Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. . . . A new CBS net show, titled "The Gay Nineties," at 4 p. m. Sundays, features Jack Norworth, master of ceremonies; the Ray Brock Quartet, Genevieve Royce, soprano, and Beatrice Kay, singing comedienne. . . . Jim Williams' Ask-It-Basket program was scheduled to be concluded last Wednesday but will be back Aug. 17.

The all-star baseball game, will be held at the St. Louis Municipal Stadium, at 7:30 p. m. Sunday, July 2. The game will be broadcast on the WJZ net at 7:30 p. m. Sunday.

Judith Gamble Is Married to A. B. Shepley Jr.

Fashionable Gathering for Late Afternoon Ceremony at Westminster Presbyterian Church — Garden
Reception at Bride's Home.

MISS JUDITH BROOKES GAM-BLE and Arthur B. Shepley Jr. were married Friday afternoon by the Rev. David L. Stitt at Westminster Presbyterian Church, of which he is pastor. A fashionable assemblage of more than 500 guests filled the auditorium at 5:30 o'clock as the bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence O. Gamble, followed a large wedding party down the aisle to a candlelit setting.
Masses of greenery—lemon foliage and cybidium ferns—reaching across the front of the church, were accented by a simple arrangement of white larkspur in the center, and thick white candles in tall standard stood in several groups of three at either side.

The procession was led by 14 ushers and included the bride's nine attendants—Miss Clarissa Dana of Cincinnati, maid of honor, and the following bridesmaids—Mrs. John Hamilton Briggs of Chicago and Mrs. Edward Lawrence Keyes, the bridegroom's sisters; Mrs. John R.
Caulk Jr., Miss Peggy Wendling,
Miss Mary Elizabeth Bascom and Miss Mary Pettus, all of St. Louis;
Mrs. William H. Evans of Pittsburgh, formerly of St. Louis, and Mrs. W. Ledyard Mitchell of Grosse Point, Mich. Their gowns were white mouseline de soie, with broad robin's egg blue moire girthing in long, flat streamers at the side front, and their hats wide-brimmed, natural-colored leghorns trimmed with front clusters of pink roses. Made with long, full skirts over tulle, the bodices of their frocks were drop-shouldered fichus of deep folds of the material, crossed in front to achieve a deep
V. Each attendant carried an armful of Peter Briarcliff roses in her hand.

Mr. Gamble escorted his daughter down the aisle and gave her in marriage. She wore white tulle, a filmy gown, its skirt fashioned of several tulle layers ending in a long train, and its bodice, tucked in front and cut to a deep square V, set on with a wide girde. Sleeves ending just below the elbow were made of a single layer of tulle in leg-of-mutton effect. Her veil was arranged from old family lace which formed a draped cap and continued into a wide lace panel on the tulle. The bride carried white stephanotis and double white del-phinium.

Mr. Shepley was attended by his cousin, Ephron Catlin, III of New York, as best man. Ushers were Gordon Brown, Lawrence H. Mills and Oliver G. Sterling, New York;
Villat G. Schroeder and William C.
Elliot, Philadelphia; G. Andrews
Epp, Cincinnati; John Hamilton
Briggs, Chicago, and the following St. Louisans: Dr. Edward Lawrence Keyes, Henry F. Langenberg, Henry Hitchcock, E. Lan-
Joseph Drew and William McRee Drew.

The mothers of both the bride and bridegroom were in gray. Mrs.
Gamble wore a broad-brimmed brown hat and brown accessories with her gray chiffon gown, and brown orchids were fastened at her bosom. Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley was in pale gray chiffon with white orchids and a large black hat.

After the ceremony a small reception was held at the Gamble home, 5327 Waterman avenue. The receiving line formed at the living room fireplace against a simple background of white larkspur cascading from the mantel ledge. The staircase was garlanded in green, with white blossoms on the newel post. In the dining room, where the wedding party was seated for dinner, a large slender U-shaped table was decorated with a broad chain of larkspur down the center, and was lighted by white candles in silver candelabra. Small tables were set up in the garden back of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Shepley have left on a six-week cruise for their honeymoon, and will return here to live.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry French Knight and the late Dr. and Mrs. David C. Gamble, and a great-granddaughter of Hamilton
Rowan Gamble, Civil War Governor of Missouri, and the Rev. Dr. James H. Brooks, well-known Presbyterian clergyman. She attended Mary Institute and John Burroughs School and was graduated from Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. She is a member of the Junior League and is a former debutante. Mr. Shepley, whose father died in 1918, is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ephron Catlin, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Rutledge Shepley. He is a graduate of Groton (Mass.) School, of Yale and of Harvard Law School.
He is a member of the St. Louis Country, University and Noonday clubs.

St. Louisans Open Summer Homes In the East

Daughter of Baron and Baroness Van Eck Makes Debut
—Mrs. George S. Mephram and Nieces Visit World's Fair.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, July 1.

BEING a debutante is a year-round occupation in and around
New York, where parties begin in June for next year's crop and continue well into the following spring. On Saturday, Baron and Baroness Jan C. Van Eck, who were in St. Louis recently, had a reception and dinner dance at Bellora Villa, their Greenwich estate, to introduce their daughter, Henrietta Marie. The occasion was also Baron and Baroness Van Eck's silver wedding anniversary. Several hundred guests wandered through the gardens, which were looking their best with lilies and delphinium, and sat at small tables scattered over the adjoining lawns. Later in the evening, the debutante and her friends dined in the garden and danced out-of-doors with illumination supplied by a clever arrangement of yellow lanterns. Inside the house, where the Van Ecks and their five children received their guests, there were spring flowers and silver leaves—the latter carrying out a suggestion of the anniversary. Callers during the afternoon included David O'Neill, the poet; Mrs. O'Neill and their son, Horton; Mr. and Mrs. Grant G.
Simmons, whose Norman Chateau on the tip of Fishers Island is well known to St. Louisans who spend their summers at nearby Watch Hill and Narragansett Pier, and a number of former St. Louisans who now live in Greenwich.

Although Miss Mimi Francis had her official "coming out" party before Christmas, she is still in the midst of a round of debutante activities. Last Thursday, when Sherman Billingsley, owner of the Stork Club, thought up the idea of debutante night at Coney Island, Miss Francis was among the enthusiastic group gathered together for an early dinner and an evening of merrymaking. After a sophisticated season of theaters, dances and restaurants, a carnival night of roller coasters, hot dogs, shooting galleries and hokum, has an appeal all its own for the debutantes.

This week end Miss Clifford Watson is going up to Jamestown, R. I., to join her parents, Capt. and Mrs.
Edward H. Watson, who have been there for several weeks at their cottage. Mrs. Watson is the former Hermine Gratz of St. Louis. The Howard Benois are at their Jamestown cottage, which is on the side of the island facing Newport, and Miss Elizabeth Benois, who lives in New York, is spending the summer with them. Another daughter, Mrs. Roland Richards, and her children, Patricia and Abigail, are also visiting the Benois.

Miss Martha Love and Miss Kate
Davis Pulitzer sailed Wednesday afternoon on the Normandie for a summer in Europe. They will land in Plymouth and go directly to London to spend a week before going on to Paris. Miss Pulitzer will spend August on the Italian Riviera with her brother and sister-in-law,
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer Jr.
They have taken a house known as "Castello" in Portofino, Italy. Early in September, they will visit Henry P. McIlhenny of Philadelphia at Glennvagh Castle, his home in Ireland.

With Long Island so near at hand, many New Yorkers go to summer resorts dotting the Sound as well as the ocean side of the islands. Mrs. Frederick Hattersley, the former Lella Chopin daughter of Kate Chopin, the author, is already at Easthampton, and soon
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Brander will move out to "Roundabout Farm" at Wainscott—just two miles from Easthampton. Their rambling salt box house has been named after Mrs. Brander's father's ancestral place in Orange County, Virginia.
(Mrs. Brander was Mrs. Henry C.
Garneau, the former Miss Nannie Johnson of St. Louis.)

At "Roundabout Farm" there is a white picket fence, with gate posts copied from the ones in Williamsburg, Va. The 205-year-old white clapboard house just now is almost smothered with pink roses.
During the summer, Mrs. Brander will entertain her sister, Mrs. Frances Johnson Morin, of Button place, Mrs. Morin's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Corsan Blair, of 175 East Seventy-ninth street, will also be on Long Island with the Branders. The Blairs have one child, Cynthia Cassandre Blair, born June 16 at Doctors Hospital.

Mrs. George S. Mephram and her grandnieces, Miss Georgia Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Lee, returned to St. Louis this week end after a visit to the fair. Mrs.
Mephram came East recently with her niece, Mr. Oliver J. Keller.

MRS. GEORGE PHILIP JR., the former Miss Margaret Stewart
Tausig, daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Joseph K. Tausig. She was married at Virginia House, Norfolk, Va., where her father, a former St.
Louisian, is commandant of the Fifth Naval District.

Prospective Debutante Feted at Large Party

MISS ROSALIE FITZBUGH
RANDOLPH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzbugh
Randolph, 300 East Bodley avenue, Kirkwood, was guest of honor at the largest early summer party given for debutantes of next season, when Joseph Desloge was host last evening at his home, Vouziers, in Florissant. It was a swimming party, followed by a buffet supper and dancing.
Beside prospective debutantes and friends of the host and of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph, the 400 guests included a few friends of Miss Rosalie's from previous seasons.
Miss Randolph received with her house guest, Miss Elizabeth Herrin of Clarkdale, Miss, who arrived Friday and will remain over July 4. The honor guest was gowned in bouffant white organza.

Miss Ruth Percy And Dr. T. E. Knox To Marry Today

MISS RUTH ELIZABETH PERCY will become the bride of Dr. Thomas Edward Knox at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon at a ceremony performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Percy, 6035 Westminster place. Today is the twenty-ninth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Percy. Mr. John Spencer will conduct the service. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Knox, 4527 Ruskin avenue.

The mantel on the east side of the living room has been banked with white snapdragon and larkspur and flame gladioli, to form a path for the ceremony. The bride will walk down the hall stairway to meet at the foot by her father, who will give her in marriage. She will wear a street-length gown of wider blue sheer crepe with a matching fitted coat of the same material. Bands of fagoting trim the square neckline of the gown. The bride will wear white orchids on her shoulder and a broad-brimmed hat of white straw, trimmed with navy blue ribbons. Mrs. Eugene Michael Kruse of Cleveland, who attended her sister's wedding, was a bridesmaid. The maid of honor, Mrs. Percy, the daughter of the bride's father, will wear a gown of white sheer crepe and her long, fitted coat of white. She will wear gardenias and an off-the-face hat of white straw. John Knox will attend his brother as best man.

A reception will be given for members of the two families, also of the Percy home. Dr. Knox and his bride will leave by motor for California, where they will spend the month of July. They plan to take a cottage at one of the resorts. On their return they will live at 368 North Taylor avenue.

Elizabeth Bevington And C. S. Via Are Wed

MISS ELIZABETH BEVINGTON, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Morris R. Bevington, became the bride of Charles Stuart Via, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Via of Cassville, Mo., yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Rev. George Wales King performed the ceremony, in the absence of Dr. George W. Tyler, pastor of the Presbyterian Church who, because of illness, was unable to attend. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, 5651 Dover place.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white crepe street-length costume with a corsage of gardenias. Miss Ethel Mitchell of Pawhuska, Ok., the maid of honor, was in pale pink and wore a corsage of roses. Carl Fox of Kansas City was best man. Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was held. Assisting at the reception were Miss Betty McCarty, Miss Helen Heath, Miss Myla Stephens, Mrs. Horace Allen, sorority sisters of the bride, and Miss Betty Jean Hemphill, her cousin.

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clyde Hemphill, Washington, the bride's aunt and uncle; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph T. Hemphill and Miss Betty Jean Hemphill, Oklahoma City, Ok., the bride's aunt and uncle; and Dr. and Mrs. Horace Allen of Columbia, Mo. The bride received her A. B. degree and her M. A. degree from the University of Missouri where she was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. She formerly taught in the St. Louis public schools and is now a member of the faculty at Mary Institute. The bridegroom was graduated from the Missouri State Teachers' College at Springfield and from the University of Missouri where he received his M. A. degree. He is a member of the faculty of the Hancock Junior High School, St. Louis County.

Forty-fifth Wedding Anniversary. A surprise party was given for Mr. and Mrs. John Ramsport at their home, 8007 Nottingham avenue, by a group of their friends Tuesday evening, the occasion being their forty-fifth wedding anniversary. They were presented with a bouquet of 45 red roses.

Betty Hessing Is Married in Garden Setting

MISS BETTY HESSING became the bride of John Charles Broemmelsiek Friday evening at a ceremony performed in the garden at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hessing, 25 Southmore. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Broemmelsiek, 28 Clermont lane.

White rose-covered arches led from the marble terrace to three pergolas at the south end of the garden. The center pergola, largest of the three, was covered with wisteria vines and roses and held the organ which played the wedding marches. White roses were entwined about the other pergolas. The garden was illuminated by white lights in the tops of trees.

The bride was escorted down a white path by her father, who gave her in marriage. The Rev. Dr. Edward B. Williamson of Delmar Baptist Church performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Robert O. Kevin of Grace Episcopal Church, Kirkwood.

The bride wore the wedding gown and veil of her sister, Mrs. Frank Proctor. Her gown was white satin, fashioned with a heart-shaped neckline and sleeves full at the shoulder and fitted tight to traditional points over her hands. The full skirt, extending into a long train, was shirred at the back to a low waistline. Her veil was held by a coronet of calla lilies and tulle. She carried lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Proctor, who served as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Barbara Broemmelsiek, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Ruth Pfingsten, Miss Carol McCarthy and Miss Jean Dicks, wore light turquoise marquisette. The square necklines of their bouffant dresses were edged with charity lace, as were their short puffed sleeves. Matching blue-velvet ribbons were wound through beading at the waistlines and tied in bows in front. They fell to the flounced hems. Mrs. Proctor carried coral gladioli. The bridesmaids' bouquets were the yellow blossoms.

Mrs. Hessing's gown had a bodice of light pink lace and a matching chiffon skirt. She wore white orchids. Mrs. Broemmelsiek wore white silk crepe, printed with American beauty red and dark blue flowers, and she wore purple orchids. Charles Beasel was best man for Mr. Broemmelsiek, and ushers included Frank Proctor, George Wilson, Vernon Trampe and John W. Hessing, brother of the bride.

The bride and bridegroom, their parents and the wedding party received friends after the ceremony, standing before the improvised altar. Trees in the garden were illuminated for the occasion.

Mr. Broemmelsiek and his bride will motor East to Greenwich, Conn., where they will remain about two weeks. They will live in St. Louis.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mrs. Homer A. La Barr of Bonville, Mo., and James Sparks of Chicago, uncle of the bridegroom.

The bride, a graduate of Community and John Burroughs Schools, spent one year at Oberlin College. She later was graduated from Washington University, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Mr. Broemmelsiek attended Dennison University, Granville, O., and Washington University. His fraternity is Phi Delta Theta.

The ceremony was performed in the chancel of the church before a lower of palms, ferns and white flowers. Gandelabra resting on the communion table in the center of the chancel afforded the only light during the service.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon and lace and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white larkspur. Miss Kreutzer was unattended. The bride's mother wore a dusty pink shadow chiffon gown with a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. Christopher was attired in a printed crepe with gardenias at her waist. The groom had as his best man Henry Price of New York.

Bride-Elect Honored At Bridge Party

MISS MARGARET ELIZABETH MALLORY, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roy C. Mallory, 7269 Melrose avenue, was hostess at a bridge party and miscellaneous shower Friday night at her home in honor of Miss Florence Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Wood, 7819 Gannon avenue. Miss Wood will be married to George Henry Barlow Jr. of St. Louis late in the summer.

After bridge games, refreshments were served 34 guests at a table decorated with garden flowers. Mr. Barlow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Barlow of Pittsburgh, formerly of St. Louis.

MRS. CHARLES VINCENT MILLER, who was Miss Kathleen Laves, daughter of Lewis E. Laves, Warden of Sing Sing Prison, Ossining, N. Y., was married Tuesday in Briar Cliff, N. Y. Mr. Miller, the son of Mrs. Alexander Miller, will bring his bride here to live.

Grand Semaine Celebrated in Paris

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, June 25. FASHIONABLE Paris saw its gayest week, the Grande Semaine, open June 18 with the Grande Steeplechase de Paris at Auteuil, and close today with the running of the Grand Prix at Longchamps. This is the 150th anniversary of the French Republic and the celebrations go on to July 14, Independence day. After that things begin at the various resorts and smart Parisians are away from Paris till the autumn.

Among the St. Louisans in Paris for the season are Mrs. and Mrs. Sidney T. Allen, who are staying at the Plaza Athenee. The Allens, who travel a great deal, always take with them their collection of Chinese dragons which, with other Oriental art objects, they have picked up on visits to the Far East.

Mrs. Walter Russell is also in Paris at the Hotel Astoria. She will have a table at the George V. for the Drag day luncheon. Mrs. Russell's daughter, the Vicomtesse de Roziere, has just returned from a short visit to America.

Returning to Paris today are M. and Mme. Pierre Claudel and their baby daughter, who was born in Paris last year. After a few days in Paris with their parents, M. Paul Claudel, former French Ambassador to Washington, and Mme. Claudel, they will go to the country for the summer. Mme. Claudel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Cartier of New York. Her mother was Miss Elma Rumsey of St. Louis.

The Comtesse de Nougé, who was Miss Theresa Taylor of St. Louis, is staying with her nephew, Comte Jehan de Nougé, at his country place, L'Abbaye du Lys at Dammarie-les-Lys. Later in the summer the Comtesse will join her daughter, Baroness de Sevin, in the Pyrenees. The Baroness, who was Miss Guillemette de Nougé, lives with her husband and children in Meknes, Morocco.

Comte Jehan de Nougé returned recently from America, where he visited St. Louis and gave lectures on French chateaux, gardens and traditions. On his first visit to St. Louis the latter part of March, Comte de Nougé stayed at "Votiers," the home of Joseph Desloge. On his return to St. Louis in the middle of April he lectured at the Twentieth Century Art Club, the Taylor School and the Alliance Francaise. The Count expects to stay part of the summer at his chateau, later traveling in France to gather material for his tour in America next winter. He will have 15 subjects for his lectures.

The American colony in London will have the Duke of Kent as guest of honor at the annual Independence day banquet and ball at the Dorchester July 4. The Duke is making an effort to honor all important organizations and societies before he and the Duchess leave for Australia in October. The American Ambassador, Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, will preside at the dinner.

Among the members of Les Amis des Livres Francais received by the Duchesse de Broglie at her home in the rue de Chateaubriand, was Miss Zelina de Macklot Thompson. Others who heard the Comte de Saint-Aulaire talk on Francis Joseph and the Empress Elizabeth, were Mme. Lebrun, the wife of the President of the French republic; the Comtesse de Rochambeau, Gen. Azan, Mrs. William F. McKnight, the Comtesse de Dampierre, the Marquise de Chambrun and Mrs. Burke-Rocha.

MRS. JAMES WILLIAM BAGBY, who was, before her marriage June 17, Miss Eugenia Busch Kircher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore E. Kircher of Belleville.

JUNE BRIDES

Mary Louise Harvey Is Married at Home

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester L. Harvey, 82 Lake Forest, was the scene late yesterday of the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mary Louise Harvey, and Philip Everett Hancock, son of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Hancock, 8851 Natural Bridge avenue.

The Rev. Anselm Secor of St. Anne's Church, Normandy, performed the ceremony at the living room fireplace, which was banked in palms and ferns, with bowls of lilies and snapdragon adorning the mantel ledge. Early summer flowers in pastel shades decorated the hall and dining room.

The bride and her father, who gave her in marriage, were preceded down the stairway and to the improvised altar by her twin sister, Miss Althea Louise Harvey, who wore a powder blue afternoon frock of silk crepe made with V-neck and short puffed sleeves, and trimmed with fagoting. With her costume she wore a white straw hat and a corsage of gardenias.

The bride's gown was white silk jersey, short sleeves, draped, and white buttons on the V-neck bodice. She wore a large white straw hat banded in gros grain ribbon with streamers in back, and white orchids clustered at her shoulder. James Chanslor was best man.

After the ceremony the parents of the principals received with them, Mrs. Harvey in blue-printed white chiffon and Mrs. Hancock in blue lace. Both wore gardenias.

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Hancock will live at 6550 Natural Bridge avenue.

To Celebrate Anniversary. To celebrate their silver wedding anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hearst, 3815 West Pine boulevard, have invited friends and relatives to a reception at their home from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon.

MRS. NATHANIEL RANDOLPH REYBURN, the former Miss Myra Stout Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Watson of Morrisville, N. J., where she was married June 23. Mr. Reymun is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Randolph Reymun, Fairfield, Conn., formerly of St. Louis, and grandson of Mrs. Charles Fletcher Sparks.

Mary Lou Bollinger And F. J. Maginn Jr., Married in Church

MISS MARY LOU BOLLINGER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton B. Bollinger, 446 East Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, was married yesterday morning at 9 o'clock to Francis J. Maginn Jr., son of Francis J. Maginn, 5954 Minerva avenue. The ceremony was performed at Holy Redeemer Church of Webster Groves by the Rev. F. J. Dooley. White mixed flowers and white tapers decorated the chancel.

The bride was gown in a bouffant frock of white marquisette over ivory satin, the full skirt extending into a train which was edged, like the skirt, with a row of row of ruching. The bodice had short puffed sleeves and was cut to a V-neckline. She wore a fingertip-length veil of tulle secured to the head by a tulle halo and carried a bouquet of white snapdragons and gladioli.

Miss Ruth Marie Bollinger, who was her sister's maid of honor, wore periwinkle blue marquisette made like that of the bride and a large leghorn hat trimmed with fresh gladioli of a pale yellow tone to match her bouquet. Miss Virginia Koenenman and Miss Marjorie Casey were the bridesmaids. Miss Koenenman's gown was of powder blue marquisette and the flowers in her bouquet and on her hat were peach glow gladioli. Hyacinth blue marquisette was used for Miss Casey's costume and her flowers were deep peach-colored gladioli.

Mrs. Bollinger wore navy blue and white sheer accented by a corsage of gardenias.

Betty Jane Foote Wed to C. P. Beal

THE First Unitarian Church was decorated with greenery and clusters of early summer white flowers for the wedding yesterday evening of Miss Betty Jane Foote, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Foote, 309 Greeley avenue, Webster Groves, and Chester Paul Beal. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Ray Shute, 3520 North Taylor avenue. About 200 guests attended the wedding. The Rev. Lambert Case officiated.

Miss Jane Anderson was maid of honor and Miss Deloras Wein and Miss Julia Foote, an aunt of the bride, were bridesmaids. Charles Knaus was best man for Mr. Beal. Emmerson Foote and Frank Foote, brother and cousin of the bride, respectively, James McCurdy and Pollard Watawa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Watawa, a cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Mr. Foote gave his daughter in marriage. She wore white chiffon with a finger tip tulle veil arranged with a coronet of lilies of the valley. The bride's colonial bouquet was of white roses and white larkspur.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore pastel chiffon and small contrasting hats of grosgrain ribbon. They carried colonial bouquets to match their hats. Miss Anderson was in pale blue, with a pink hat; Miss Wein wore peach with an aqua hat, and Miss Julia Foote aqua with a peach hat. Mrs. Foote's costume was of yellow lace and Mrs. Shute's pale green taffeta.

After the ceremony the bridal party greeted guests in the reception room of the church, which was lighted with white candles and decorated with garden flowers. A reception for 100 guests was held later at the Foote home. Mr. Beal and his bride will live at 203 North Kirkwood road.

Miss Marjorie Punch To Be October Bride

MRS. AND MRS. MONTAGUE PUNCH, 7101 Cornell avenue, University City, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Roselyn Punch, and Edward Pittman Stuart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Stuart, 451 West Swon avenue, Webster Groves. The wedding is planned for October.

Chester Von Rump Weds Lillian James

MISS LILLIAN JAMES and Chester Von Rump were married Friday night at 8 o'clock at the First Congregational Church. The Rev. Dr. Robert Porter, pastor, performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. James of St. Louis, and has made her home here with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott James, and her sister, Emilie, at 3302 Magnolia avenue. Mr. Von Rump is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman A. Von Rump, 222 West Big Bend road, Webster Groves.

Tapers, greenery and white spring flowers decorated the church for the candlelight ceremony. The bride wore white lace, her gown fashioned with a bolero jacket made with leg o' mutton sleeves. White satin bound the high neckline and peplum of the jacket. She wore a fingertip veil fastened to a coronet of orange blossoms and pearls. Her bouquet was Easter lilies and baby's breath.

Miss Emilie James, who served as maid of honor, wore blue sheer crepe, her gown skirted at a high waistline, and her bolero jacket of matching crepe quilted and fashioned with short sleeves. She wore blue velvet bows in her hair, and carried pink roses. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Elliott James and Miss Adele Bowler, the former groomed in dusty pink sheer crepe and the latter in light green. Their gowns were also skirted at the high waistline, and tied with velvet ribbons in contrasting colors that fell to the hems of their full skirts. They wore velvet bows in their hair and carried pink roses.

Langston Van Dover was best man and usher, wearing Arthur Lee Von Rump, brother of the bridegroom; Henry Stocke and Dr. Francis Thornton.

Mrs. Von Rump chose a printed gown of blue and white crepe, with which she wore a white turban and gardenias.

Mr. Von Rump and his bride have left for a short motor trip through Kentucky, and will make their home in St. Louis on their return.

Mildred Sue Stanton and R. W. Wetteroff Wed

THE marriage of Miss Mildred Sue Stanton, daughter of Mrs. Ruth Gannett Stanton, 5574 Pershing avenue, and Ralph Waldo Wetteroff of St. Louis County took place at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 24, in the Church of St. Michael and St. George. The Rev. J. Francis Sant performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Wyllis Gannett Stanton, was gowned in white marquisette trimmed in lace and wore a finger-tip veil of white tulle adorned with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli tips and baby breath.

Miss Marie Wetteroff, sister of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant. Miss Wetteroff wore pink mouseline de sole trimmed with blue and carried a bouquet of spring flowers to harmonize with her gown. Edward J. Bakula was the best man for Mr. Wetteroff.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to members of the bridal party and the immediate families at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence V. Beck, 6012 Clemens avenue, uncle and aunt of the bride. After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Wetteroff will live in Harrisburg, Ill.

Joan Betteken Engaged
To Cyril J. Wenger

MRS. R. AND MRS. JOSEPH C.
BETTEKEN, 3638 Bellevue boulevard, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Joan Marie, and Cyril J. Wenger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wenger, 3919 Ashland avenue.

The engagement was announced
Thursday evening at a buffet supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Betteken at their home. Each guest received a gardenia tied with a miniature engagement ring, to which was attached a scroll written with the names of the engaged pair.

Miss Betteken is a great-granddaughter of Antoine Girardin, one of the first Judges of the St. Clair County (Illinois) Court of Common Pleas in 1790. She is a distant cousin of the late Gen.
Joseph Jacques Joffre of France.

Mr. Wenger attended Washington University and received his
S. S. degree in engineering from the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla. He is a member of Theta Tau, professional fraternity.

The wedding will take place in cago, have returned to their home after a visit here.

Another CHARIS Money-Saving Offer!

Earlier this year, to demonstrate the unusual quality of Charis-designed controlling garments, we offered a beautifully made bandeau at a greatly reduced price. This offer, proving as it did the superior materials, design and value found in Charis garments was, literally, a nation-wide sensation.
But it is evident that thousands of women missed the original opportunity. Therefore, for a limited period (July 2nd to August 12th) the offer has been re-opened. And this time, it includes not only a bandeau but also a smartly styled brassiere for the woman who needs somewhat more bust control. Now, Charis offers you...

Your Choice of A Dollar - Value 25c A Dollar-and-a-Half 50c
BANDEAU for BRASSIERE for

This is truly a beautifully made bandeau, designed to satisfy the very latest requirements of smart figure styling. When you examine the bandeau closely, the fine fabric and tailoring, the way the garment is cut and reinforced to separate and lift the bust, you will know it is an unusual value — even retailing at one dollar.

ENGAGEMENTS

Pokres-Levy
 INFORMAL announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Mary Levy, daughter of Mrs. Alexander Levy, 6409 Enright avenue, and Leo Pokres, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Pokres, 5055 Cabanne avenue. No wedding date has been set.

Morrison-Luttrell

The marriage of Miss Irene Luttrell, daughter of C. H. Luttrell at Kansas City and Miami, Fla., to Alex Morrison, brother of Mrs. Joseph Agatestein, 9 Hillvale drive, took place June 17 at the home of the bride's father in Miami, where the pair plan to make their home.

McCarthy-Emken

Miss Bernice Emken, daughter of Mrs. Ann V. Emken, 5052 Astra avenue, and Vincent T. McCarthy, son of Mrs. John J. McCarthy, 5438 Geraldine avenue, were married Saturday morning, June 24, at St. Philip Neri Church. The Rev. John J. Manion officiated.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Emken, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Kathleen Burns, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Dan B. McCarthy, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Richard Francisco, his nephew, and James O'Neil were ushers.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Richard Burns. She wore a gown of white silk net fashioned with a long train, and a veil held by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Mary Elizabeth Emken was gown in green net over taffeta and carried spring flowers. The flower girl wore pink net and carried a basket of blossoms.

After the ceremony a breakfast was given at Norwood Hills Country Club. In the afternoon a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy are now on a motor trip West, and will visit California before returning to St. Louis to live.

Warren-Flaughner

The wedding of Miss Alice Flaughner, daughter of Mrs. Caroline M. Flaughner, 4709 Greer avenue, and Charles R. Warren, son of Mrs. Virginia Warren, 3604 Washington avenue, took place Saturday afternoon, June 24, at the Second United Presbyterian Church. The Rev. R. W. Frost performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Geraldine Vaughan as maid of honor, and by Miss Rosemary Klein and Miss Patricia Grimley as bridesmaids. Helen Hogan was flower girl. Vern Stingley was best man and ushers included William Dempster and Robert Simmons.

A supper for the bridal party and two families was given at the Saum Hotel, and a reception was held later in the evening.

Deutschmann-McCarthy

The engagement of Miss Nora Marie McCarthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. McCarthy, 300 South Sappington road, Kirkwood, and Clarence Deutschmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Deutschmann, Manchester road, Kirkwood, was announced at a tea given yesterday afternoon by the parents of the bride-elect.

About 75 guests were present, and each received a rose bud, to which was attached a ring and scroll, bearing the names of the pair. Spring flowers decorated the house.

Schill-Duessel

Miss Dolores Marie Duessel and Harold W. Schill were married yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Roch's Church. Mr. John P. Spencer performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Catherine Duessel, 1049 South Taylor avenue, and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schill, Quincy, Ill.

Miss Marie Kuhner attended the bride as maid of honor, and Austin Schill of Quincy, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Jerome Krutzsch and John Lambur of St. Louis.

Lammlein-Woltering

The marriage of Miss Rose Mary Woltering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph William Woltering, 4119 South Compton avenue, and Raymond W. Lammlein, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lammlein, 5021 Idaho avenue, took place Saturday morning, June 17, at St. Anthony's Church. The Rev. Michael Werning performed the ceremony.

The bride wore white net over satin, and her long tulle veil fell from a band of pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book covered with gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Woltering, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Vera Lammlein, the bridegroom's sister, was bridesmaid. Both wore turquoise blue net and carried bouquets of daisies. They wore wreaths of the flowers in their hair. Colette Woltering, another sister of the bride, was flower girl, gown in yellow net. She carried a basket of flowers.

Ernest Schneiderhahn was best man and John Reiley the groomsmen.

A wedding breakfast was given after the ceremony at the Forest Park Hotel.

Kadlec-Hrdlicka

Miss Mildred Ann Hrdlicka, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Hrdlicka, 1821 Lafayette avenue, and Edward Francis Kadlec, were married Wednesday, June 21, at St. John's Nepomuk Church. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and

WHEN GALENTO MET THE CHAMPION

CHALLENGER'S CHARGE

Looking and fighting like a primeval man, Tony Galento rushes at Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in the third round of their championship match at Yankee Stadium last Wednesday night. Note how wide-open is the squat challenger.

TEMPORARY TRIUMPH

Galento connects with a short right uppercut and a flailing left to the mid-section and Louis goes down. But the New Jersey barkeep didn't have the ability to follow up this advantage. Louis scrambled up at the count of two and evaded Galento's rushes for the rest of the round.

CHAMPION ATTACKS

THE FINISH

Referee Arthur Donovan has just stopped the fight and lifted the dazed Galento to his feet. Galento, after being battered by the champion on the ropes, had slumped to the canvas, and wrapped his arms about Referee Donovan's legs in an effort to pull himself up.

CONSOLATION

After being patched up, Galento gets a kiss from his wife, Mary, in his dressing room. Others consolations — praise for the courage he displayed, and, not least, $50,020 for his night's work.

How Huey Long's University Took a Joyride

THE expensive nine-year joyride of Louisiana State University cracked up last week with the resignation and disappearance of its president, Dr. James Monroe Smith, followed by charges of shortages of several hundred thousands of dollars. The late Senator Huey P. Long, shortly after he became Governor in 1928, started it on the joyride to spite Tulane University, which had refused degreeless Huey an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. He and his political successors have spent an estimated $23,000,000 on construction of new buildings since Dr. Smith became president in 1930. They increased the enrollment from 2000 to 8000, and gave the university an almost fantastic reputation, while making the campus one of the most striking in the South. The Medical Center, built by Long in 1931 to spite Tulane's School of Medicine, cost $2,000,000; the Coliseum is equal in area to that of Madison Square Garden; the Stadium seats about 60,000; the $1,000,000 Huey P. Long Field House is a lavishly furnished club for the use of students. There are 100 costly grand pianos in the Music and Fine Arts Building. Funds for all this construction came from State funds, university bonds and revenue, and WPA and PWA funds. A State WPA investigation precipitated the crash.

Nevertheless, the late John M. Parker, former Governor of Louisiana who once sought Huey's removal as United States Senator, is regarded as the father of the greater Louisiana State University. It was through his influence that the present large site was purchased and the nucleus for the present plant started.

SEVERAL hundred Latter Day Saints, more than 100 of them from Salt Lake City, Utah, and other places in the West, assembled at Nauvoo, Illinois, last week end to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment there of a Mormon community. They visited buildings and other relics of the Mormon occupancy, which ended with expulsion of the Saints in 1846; held services on the site of the million dollar temple, which was destroyed by fire and storm, and outside the old jail in nearby Carthage, where Prophet Joseph Smith and Patriarch Hyrum Smith were killed by a mob; and commemorated with a pageant the founding of the church's relief society, said to have been the first women's organization of the kind in this country. Nauvoo, on the Mississippi River, is now a quiet town of about 1000 residents; it had a population of 20,000 before the Mormons, at odds with the neighbors over political and economic as well as religious matters, were forced to abandon it, one group going west to found a new Mormon city in Utah, another, under the name of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, eventually establishing headquarters at a former Mormon settling place, Independence, Missouri.

A guide indicates the window of the old jail in Carthage from which Prophet Joseph Smith jumped in trying to escape from a mob. He and Patriarch Hyrum Smith both were shot dead and John Taylor was wounded.

The abducted baby with his mother, Mrs. John McCrohan, after the child was recovered.

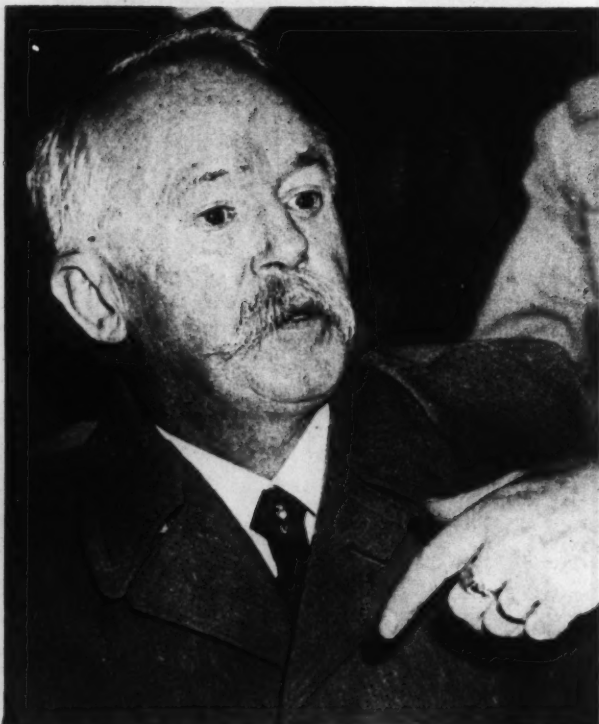

Mr. and Mrs. McCrohan with their other children: Loretta, John and Margaret.

A FANTASTIC love drama is awaiting the consideration of a Philadelphia court. It came to a climax with the kidnaping of five-months-old Gerald McCrohan from a baby carriage before a store where his mother, Mrs. John McCrohan, was shopping. Four-year-old Margaret McCrohan, who had been "minding" her little brother, gave a description of the woman who had taken the baby away. Within 24 hours Beatrice Wood, 17, had been arrested as the abductor, and the baby had been recovered from her friend, Frederick Bauers. Miss Wood's story was that she told Bauers the child was hers and that he was the father, hoping he would marry her. She said she had borne a child but it had died; no records were found to prove this. No charges were filed against Bauers. Miss Wood was placed under $10,000 bail for trial on a charge of abduction.

Vojta Benes Escapes the Nazis

AMONG a group of Czech refugees that landed at Dover, England, recently from a Polish liner was Vojta Benes, brother of Dr. Eduard Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia. He had slipped across the Polish border from Bohemia, where he had been living—friends disclosed after they were sure he was beyond the reach of Nazi police—since January; he was in Bohemia when Hitler's troops occupied the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate. Last September he came to the United States in the midst of the Czecho-Slovak crisis to make a speaking tour on behalf of his country. There has been speculation as to whether his return to Bohemia had any connection with the formation, now under way, of Czech legions in Poland and France. Many of the refugees accompanying him from Poland debarked in France to join the legion there. Vojta Benes, six years older than Eduard, is a former Senator of Czecho-Slovakia. He was in the United States between 1915 and 1919, working for the independence of his country. A daughter graduated from Vassar and a son attended school in Chicago.

WILD FLOWERS OF THE ARCTIC

Arctic scene—in summer. A bit of landscape bright with flowers in the Mackenzie Delta.

Blue lupine, a flower found both in the forested, southern part of the delta, and in the northern, barren, characteristically Arctic section.

Arctic cotton, which grows profusely on the tundra or northern barrens of the delta region and from which Eskimos used to make wicks for their whale-oil lamps.

IN PARTS of the Arctic regions wild flowers bloom profusely in early summer. Since their season is short, they must develop rapidly. Promoting this quick growth is the continuous daylight of the Northern summer, which enables the ground to radiate heat steadily. Few places in the Arctic can equal the delta of the Mackenzie River, in the Northwest Territories, for the abundance and variety of its flowers. There these color photographs were taken by Lorene Squire of Harper, Kansas, who is widely known for her photographs of wild life, particularly birds.

MRS. ARTHUR B. SHEPLEY JR.

Bride of the Week

MISS JUDITH BROOKES GAMBLE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence O. Gamble, 5327 Waterman avenue, and Arthur B. Shepley Jr., son of Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley of the St. Louis Country Club Grounds, were married last Friday at Westminster Presbyterian Church. A reception at the Gamble home following the wedding. The bride, a great-granddaughter of Hamilton Rowan Gamble, Civil War Governor of Missouri, attended Mary Institute and John Burroughs School and graduated from Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Connecticut. She made her debut a few seasons ago and is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Shepley is a graduate of Groton, Yale and Harvard Law School.

The Machine Eats Up the Tiff Miners' Jobs

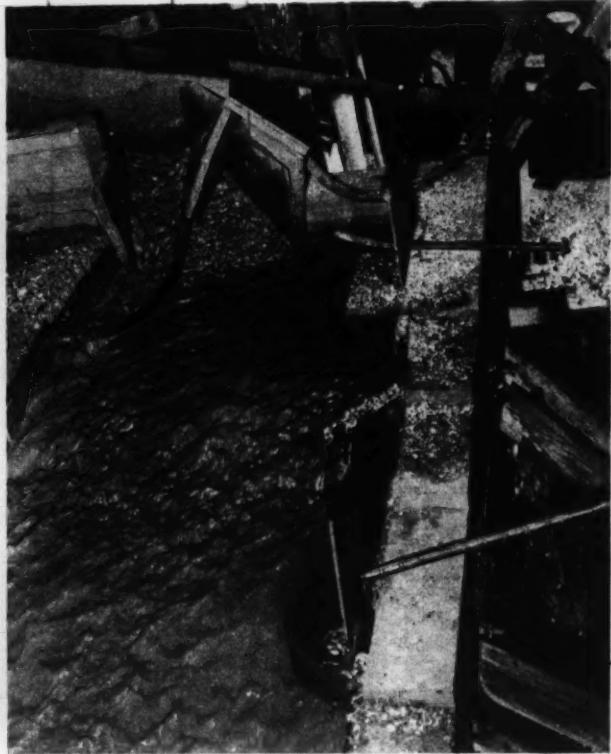

Tiff field near Cadet in Washington County. It was once "worked out" by hand miners, but thousands of tons of tiff have since been taken from it by machinery. The rail tracks circle into the field. The dump truck, loaded with tiff dirt, is now on the way to the mill.

A typical tiff miner's home near Cadet, occupied by Larry and Arthur Roderick, center. At left is Paul Declue, also a miner, and at right his son, Earl.

A mechanical tiff washer in a tiff mill, where the mineral, used in making paints, is cleaned of soil, gravel, iron and other foreign matter.

Paul Declue working in his mine, eight feet deep. This is the usual method of digging for tiff by hand.

One of the many tiff mills in Washington County. This is near Potosi. The mills buy some tiff from hand miners, but most is dug with machinery.

TIFF miners in Washington County, Missouri, national center of barite production, face a desperate economic situation as machinery outmodes hand mining and threatens to deprive them of a livelihood already near starvation. By new methods it is estimated 10 men can do the work formerly done by 300, so only a very small proportion of the approximately 3000 hand miners are being absorbed into mechanized outfits. Some of the remainder continue to dig tiff by hand in the face of a diminishing market, make from $1 to $4.50 a week, but most are forced on relief. During May 254 families were added to the county relief rolls, while the number was nearly as large in June.

By the new methods tiff-bearing dirt is scooped up with huge steam or electric shovels and hauled by trucks or railway dump cars to the mills, where tiff is separated from soil and gravel in mechanically operated washing tanks. By hand mining methods, individual miners burrow into surface veins with pick and shovel, usually on land leased to them on a percentage basis, and clean the tiff laboriously by hand. Their markets are larger operators or big mining companies, most of whom are adequately supplied by their own machine operations. But for generations tiff has been Washington County's chief industry, and the miners are forced either literally to scratch gravel to live, or go on relief.

Mechanization, the big operators contend, has been forced upon them by competitors in other regions who have been able to undersell them because of cheaper production costs due to mechanized operation.

THEY THOUGHT SHE WAS TOO BEAUTIFUL

JUNE LANG failed to get a movie contract four years ago because producers considered her too beautiful ever to become a serious dramatic actress. Then, as she was hesitating between stenography or becoming an air hostess for a career, Darryl F. Zanuck saw an old test film, and put her to work.

Since then she has appeared in leading roles in nearly a score of pictures, the most recent being "For Love Or Money." Others have been "Every Saturday Night," "Wee Willie Winkie" and "Ali Baba Goes to Town." June was born in Minneapolis May 5, 1915, is a blonde with blue eyes, and is five feet three and one-half inches tall. Her hobbies are airplanes and ball room dancing; she danced in vaudeville, musical comedies and revues before she was put under contract by a studio in 1930 to be tutored for a movie career—the same contract which failed of renewal five years later.

Some of the 20 babies engaged to appear in the movie "A Child Is Born" arriving at the studio in the arms of mothers or nurses, and being met by pediatricians and other child experts. A registered nurse rode in each automobile used to transport the children.

Checking in at the time clock, an operation the babies performed by proxy since their average age was 14 days, the youngest being six days. Employment entitled them to social security numbers and Government insurance.

One of the young movie actors being looked after by a registered nurse in a glass-enclosed booth. The onlooker wearing eye-glasses is Mary McDougal Axelson, who wrote "Life Begins" the basis for the picture. The celluloid figures are stand-ins for the infants.

20 BABES IN A MOVIE

A temporary baby ward on a studio sound stage. The infants took it easy in these bassinets when they were not working. The young woman in nurse's uniform facing the camera is Gale Page, one of the stars of the film.

One of the infant actors, Penny Diana Wisdom, before the camera—in the arms of Miss Page. Jeffrey Lynn, one of the stars, at right. Cameraman Charles Rocher at extreme left. Babies are not photographed for more than 30 seconds at a stretch. Law forbids their being under lights for more than 20 minutes of a two-hour day.

IN MAKING a movie titled "A Child Is Born," Warner Brothers recently employed 20 infants. The company used elaborate precautions in having the babies transported to its studio at Burbank, California, cared for there, photographed and returned home. The children were carefully examined before and after their "work." They were at the studio less than an hour and a half and before the cameras 73 seconds while five takes were made. Their pay was $75 apiece. Here are glimpses of the studio that day.

The payoff—$75 for each baby. The children spent less than an hour and a half at the studio and their actual working time was 73 seconds.

How a Bird Killed a Snake Who Stole Her Eggs

From a position a little above the nest the snake prepares for its invasion.

The robber examines the two eggs in the nest and selects one to begin its meal.

Although the egg is far larger than the snake's head, the reptile's extensible jaws permit it to take the whole egg in its mouth.

Close view of the snake as it works to swallow the egg whose contents it expects to extract later.

Suddenly the mother bird appears, swooping down to attack the invader of her home. The snake rears its head to meet the attack, but the egg fills its mouth and it can do little to defend itself.

Retribution has overtaken the robber. With two fierce strokes of her beak the bird has broken the snake's back in two places, and now holds the lifeless body of the enemy, the egg which caused the reptile's downfall still unbroken in its distended mouth.

THIS unusual series of photographs shows two creatures of the South African wilds enacting a real-life adventure story of plunder, violent death and classic retribution. An egg-eating snake is surprised by a mother bird in the act of robbing her nest; the bird kills the snake because the latter is unable to make effective resistance with its mouth filled with a stolen egg. The photographer came along just in time to film the whole conflict.

THE SURREALIST WORLD AT A NIGHT CLUB

The backdrop for the production is interpreted as the story of woman's slavery to age. When young, her heart is locked in a safe; and she is chained to the tree of love although butterflies of happiness are to be seen. However, she inevitably ends up in a morass of age, peering into a mirror for a last look at herself.

TAKING a cue from the theme of the New York World's Fair, the International Casino, one of Broadway's night clubs, has inaugurated a surrealist show designed and staged with the purported view of predicting "The Show Girls of Tomorrow." Subjects include a modern Venus, who has four arms instead of none until an adjustment is made of her robe during her presentation, at which time she is revealed precisely as her classical counterpart; a modern Mercury, Miss Five and Ten, Miss Neptune, Harlequinade and Miss Party Girl. The costumes and scenery for the show at International Casino were designed in the Salvador Dali style by Billi Livingston and Watson Barratt, excursionists in the realm of surrealist art.

"Excuse me for getting personal—but haven't you gone pretty far with this nose idea? Enough is enough, I always say. It's none of my business—but what's a nose like that for?"

"You don't tell me!... You fill it full of water on a hot day—yes, yes, go on... Then you throw it up over your head and give yourself a shower? Boy!... you've got something there!"

"Don't try to sell me one though! Nope—I've got my own system. A soft, cooling sprinkle of downy Johnson's Baby Powder...no prickly heat or chafing after that kind of shower!"

"Ho-ho, I knew you'd like Johnson's! It's made of such fine talc, and no orris-root. You guess it must cost a lot? You guessed wrong, pal—it costs so little that every baby can have some!"

SCENIC BEAUTY SPOTS IN MISSOURI'S OZARKS

SCENIC spots of the Missouri Ozarks can hold their own among any to be found in the United States, justification for which is seen in the thousands of tourists who visit them each summer. The photographs on this page show four outstanding points of interest and beauty in the color that is so intrinsically a portion of their appeal.

Meramec Spring, near St. James. Although privately owned, it is open to the public. It was left to the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri by the late Mrs. Wortham James, with the stipulation that if they do not accept it, it goes to the State as a State park or, failing that, it is to be offered to the Federal Government.

KNOW WE HAVE IT -- THEY'LL --

ONLY ONE
THAT! HERE COMES A GUARD! BE READY TO ACT -- QUICK!

ALL RIGHT -- YOU WITH THE MUSTACHE! TURN AROUND -- WHILE I UNLOCK THAT CHAIN!
YER GOIN' TO ANOTHER CELL!
TO GET SOME SPECIAL ATTENTION!

ARE YOU, WHISKERS!

THAT
HIS KEYS FELL OUT OF REACH! HIS DISINTEGRATOR --
THERE, BUDDY!! HAN' ME
IT -- QUICK! I GOTTA GIT
LOOSE! WE'LL BE LANDIN' IN 'BOUT SIX MINUTES!
LATE!!

GOSH, BARNEY --
I -- I DON'T THINK
I CAN STRETCH THAT FAR!

THAT STUPID JAILER!
WHAT'S TAKING HIM SO LONG?
SURGANN! GO AND GET HIM BACK HERE -- AT ONCE!
WE'RE ALMOST READY TO LAND!

JUNGLE JIM

BY ALEX RAYMOND

RED STACEY'S TRAGIC STORY WINS JIM'S SYMPATHY. SO HE, LIL AND KOLU SET OUT FOR STACEY'S PLANTATION TO PICK UP THE TRAIL OF HIS MISSING WIFE.

"FRANKLY, RED, I DON'T LIKE THIS TERRITORY. I'VE BEEN HERE BEFORE. THE NATIVES ARE MOODY AND UNFRIENDLY TO WHITE MEN."

"I KNOW. WE'VE HAD A GREAT DEAL OF TROUBLE WITH THEM."

LEAVING THEIR CANOE, THEY STRIKE OUT OVERLAND. SUDDENLY, JIM STOPS AND SNIFFS---

JIM'S SUSPICIONS ARE BORNE OUT. FROM A HILLTOP, THEY VIEW THE SMOLDERING RUINS OF STACEY'S PLANTATION!

Flash Gordon

Registered U. S. Patent Office

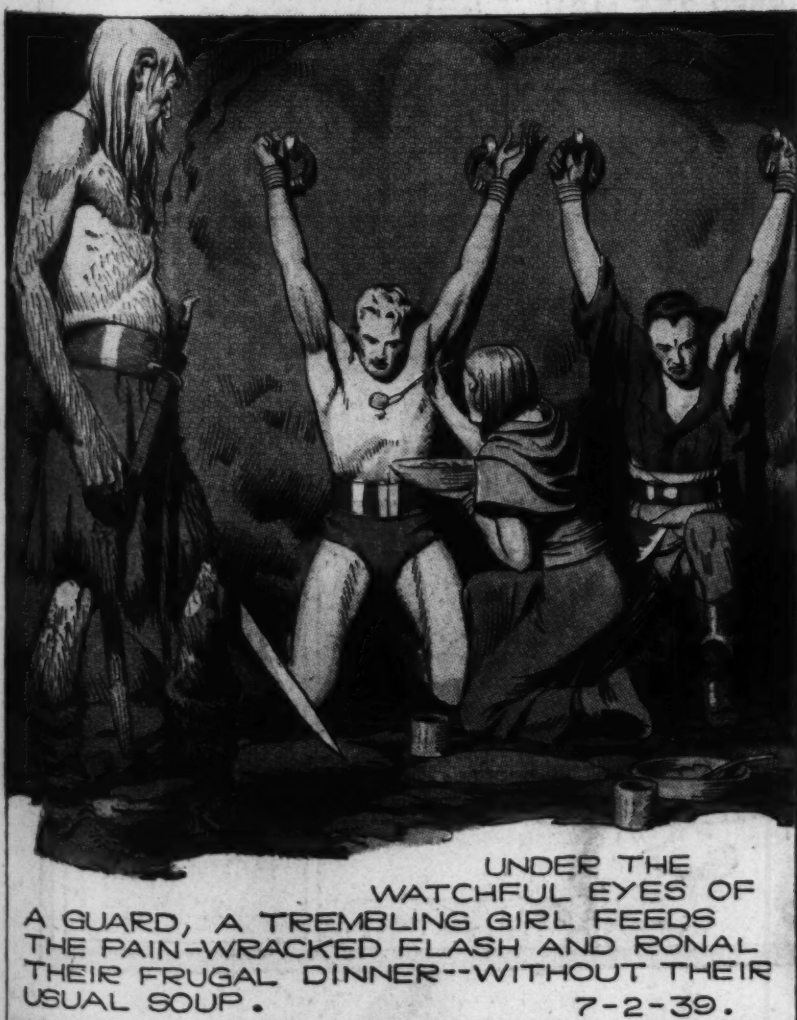

WHEN A SLAVE GIRL COMES INTO HER HIDING-PLACE--THE GIANTS' STORE-ROOM--FRIA SEIZES HER WHISPERING--
"BE STILL--I AM YOUR QUEEN!"

THE QUEEN ENLISTS THE SLAVE GIRLS, HER FORMER SUBJECTS, IN HER BOLD PLAN TO DRUG THE GIANTS' SOUP, NOW COOKING ON THE VOLCANIC STEAM STOVES.

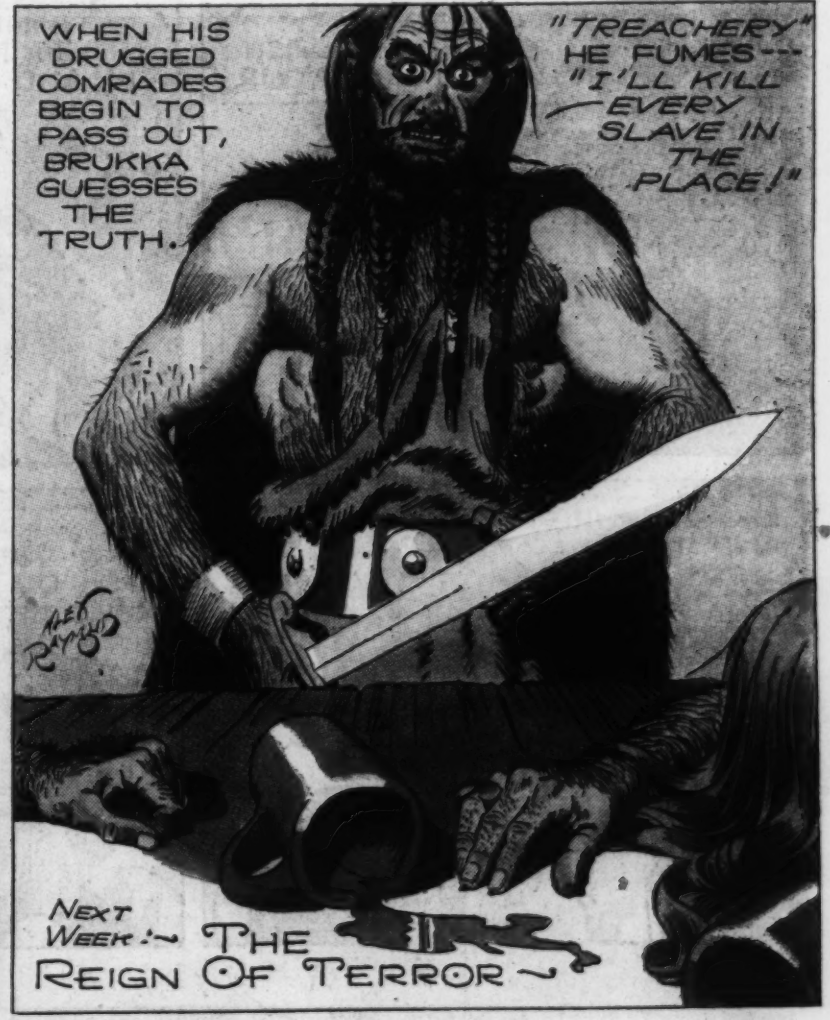

UNDER THE WATCHFUL EYES OF A GUARD, A TREMBLING GIRL FEEDS THE PAIN-WRACKED FLASH AND RONAL THEIR FRUGAL DINNER--WITHOUT THEIR USUAL SOUP.

IN THE GIANTS' DINING-HALL, FRIA'S HEART SKIPS A BEAT AS BRUKKA SNARLS---
"TAKE AWAY THIS DISHWATER! GIVE ME MY MEAT!"

WHEN HIS DRUGGED COMRADES BEGIN TO PASS OUT, BRUKKA GUESSES THE TRUTH.

"I'LL KILL EVERY SLAVE IN THE PLACE!"
